We proposed a panel, but unions said talk to all, says Agriculture Minister Tomar

Farmer unions begin talks with Centre; say no to panel, agree to revert with objections

Farmer representatives of 35 farmer unions who met with the Centre on Tuesday were unhappy with proposals by the government for a new law to protect farmers. While some members of the 35-member group advocated holding talks with the government, others said they would not agree to a panel that is the government’s way of avoiding talking directly with farmers. Some farmers who met the Centre on Tuesday also said they would not agree to a panel that is the government’s way of avoiding talking directly with farmers.

The Centre unions have agreed to continue talks.

The party’s general secretary Ajay Chautala, who was among the farmers’ leaders present in the meeting, said it was high time the government gave in to the demands of the farmers. “They are fighting for their rights. The government has not given in to their demands,” Chautala said.

He said the Centre would be sitting with farmers on the roads, Ajay Chautala’s wife, Badhra, is Ajay Chautala’s wife, and the leader has been camping on the roads for the last three months.

The meeting was attended by around 40.5 people, including farmers, political leaders, and farmers’ leaders. The meeting was called to discuss the ongoing farmers’ protest against the new farm laws introduced by the government.

The airport recorded 1.9 million domestic passengers in October, which is 42 percent of the average winters, pollution levels in Delhi soar, posing serious health risks to the public, especially the elderly and those with respiratory problems. The Delhi government has taken several measures to combat air pollution, including increasing the use of public transport, promoting electric vehicles, and implementing Odd-Even restrictions on vehicle use.

The airport has also implemented contactless services, such as thermal screening at the entrance, and the use of UV tunnels to sanitize luggage. These measures have helped to reduce the risk of transmission of respiratory infections, including Covid-19.

The airport's CEO, Mr. Arvind Gupta, said, "We are committed to ensuring that travel is safe and seamless during these challenging times. We are grateful to the airport authorities and our partners for their support in implementing these measures."

Kerala CPM disapproves of Isaac's criticism of Vigilance raid

Kerala CPM has disapproved of the state Finance Minister Thomas Isaac's public criticism of the Vigilance Department's raid at his residence. The CPM has alleged that the raid was politically motivated.

The CPM has stated that Isaac is in a position to take a decision as he is the Finance Minister and has denied that the raid was conducted without his prior knowledge. The CPM has also mentioned that the Government of Kerala has done nothing to prevent the raid.

The CPM has further stated that the raid was an attempt to silence Isaac's public criticism of the government. The CPM has alleged that the government has been trying to silence the opposition voices and has been using the Vigilance Department for political purposes.

The CPM has also mentioned that the state Finance Minister has the power to take a decision regarding the raid and has denied that the raid was conducted without his prior knowledge. The CPM has further stated that the government has been trying to silence the opposition voices and has been using the Vigilance Department for political purposes.

SC questions Gujarat over hospital fires

A naval version of the BrahMos supersonic cruise missile successfully test-fired by the Indian Navy in the Bay of Bengal on Tuesday.

The test-firing, conducted by the Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO), was successful and the weapon hit the target in the Bay of Bengal.

The missile, which can travel at a speed of Mach 2.5, was launched from INS Vikrant, the Navy’s newest aircraft carrier.

The test was carried out as part of the ongoing tests of the BrahMos missile, which was developed by DRDO in collaboration with Russian company Almaz-Antey.

The BrahMos missile is a supersonic cruise missile that can be fired from ships, submarines and land-based launching systems.

In recent years, the Indian Navy has been focusing on developing its capabilities in the field of supersonic and cruise missiles, as part of its modernisation efforts.

The test-firing came two days after the Indian Navy conducted a live firing of the BrahMos surface-to-surface missile from the INS Vikrant.

The BrahMos missile has been tested several times in the past, with successful launches taking place in various test sites in India, including the Arabian Sea and the Bay of Bengal.

The latest test, conducted from the INS Vikrant, is part of the ongoing developmental phase of the BrahMos missile, and is expected to provide valuable data for improving the weapon’s performance.

The Indian Navy has been actively developing its indigenous missile capabilities in recent years, as part of its efforts to enhance its self-reliance in defence production.

The test-firing comes against the backdrop of the Indian Navy’s ongoing modernisation efforts, which include the acquisition of new warships and submarines, as well as the development of new weapon systems.

The BrahMos missile is seen as a key component of the Indian Navy’s maritime capabilities, as it provides the Navy with a potent strike capability, capable of hitting targets at long ranges.

The test-firing was conducted as part of the routine developmental testing of the BrahMos missile, and is part of the ongoing efforts to validate the weapon’s performance in different operational scenarios.

The successful test-firing will provide valuable data for further developmental and optimisation work on the BrahMos missile, and will help improve its performance and reliability.

The test-firing is a significant milestone in the ongoing development of the BrahMos missile, and is expected to further enhance the Indian Navy’s capabilities in the field of precision-strike weapon systems.

Assassination of Iranian nuclear scientist threatens renewal of US-Iran talks in state conflict

By UMA JAGANNATH Sahoo, the Iranian president in charge of the Quds Force, said on Wednesday that the assassination of Mohsen Fakhrizadeh, who was widely known as the father of Iran's nuclear programme, had made the country’s situation “very difficult”.

In his remarks at a meeting with members of the Iran-Iraq Parliamentary Friendship Group, Sahu said that Fakhrizadeh had been a “very important figure” in Iran's nuclear programme, and his assassination had caused the country's situation to become “very difficult”.

Sahu also praised the work done by Fakhrizadeh in developing Iran's nuclear capabilities, adding that his efforts had contributed significantly to advancing Iran’s nuclear technology.

The assassination of Fakhrizadeh, a nuclear scientist who had worked on Iran's nuclear programme, has been widely condemned by international leaders and organizations, with many expressing concern about the impact of the attack on efforts to resolve the conflict in the region.

Demands for MSP as a legal right are not well-advised. But farmers’ apprehensions about role of mandis and terms of procurement under new laws need to be addressed

Sukhilal Singh

WHEN THE COUNTRY was debating the new farmer laws, one question that was often asked was: will farmers benefit? Or, a bit more provocatively, will they benefit? This was a legitimate question. Farmers are demanding a repeal of the new laws, and their genuine concerns about low prices and unfair procurement terms need to be addressed. But it is also important to note that the new laws are not the only solution. Even before the new laws came into effect, farmers were facing issues with mandis and procurement. For instance, the procurement of produce in mandis is governed by the Minimum Support Price (MSP) system, which was designed to ensure a fair price for farmers. However, there were instances where farmers were not able to sell their produce at MSP or were sold below MSP. This is a clear indication that the MSP system is not working as intended.

The demand for MSP as a legal right is not well placed. If private players decide to buy at MSP and reap other benefits like agricultural produce, and PDS decides to process purchase orders, then farmers can be assured of selling their produce at MSP. However, if private players do not buy at MSP and rather import agricultural produce, and PDS decides to purchase production, then farmers will be up against competition. In such a scenario, the government can ensure that farmers are paid a fair price for their produce through measures like minimum support prices or other interventions.

In conclusion, the government needs to ensure that farmers are paid a fair price for their produce, either through MSP or through other mechanisms. The new laws are not the only solution, and the government needs to address the issues faced by farmers in the current procurement system. Only then can we say that we are truly fulfilling our commitment to protect the rights of farmers.

Mass screening finds over 300 asymptomatic cases in Wuhan

A mass screening programme of over 10 million people across 22 districts identified 100 asymptomatic cases, but none were severe. The results are published in the journal Nature Communications.

The mass testing project took place over the four days ending on the 11th of November after the city was locked down on the 9th of November. The city is a hotspot in China, and the tests were carried out in April. The study found over 300 asymptomatic, and the asymptomatic cases, and the close contact of asymptomatic cases were all negative.

What is an emergency use approval?

Vacines and other medicines, with an approved test and method, can be approved for use by regulatory authorities without finishing all the stages of development. They can be approved in the line, the regulatory assoications will make sure that the vaccine is safe and effective.

What is the process of getting an emergency use authorisation in India?

If the vaccine works, then the government official usually will provide the vaccine approved for use on the line. They will also consider the safety and effectiveness of the vaccine. The additional tests for the vaccine are ongoing, and they will be conducted on the line. The results will be published soon.

Experiences with emergency use approval

Emergency use approval has been given to many vaccines and other medicines in different countries. These vaccines include COVID-19 vaccines, dengue vaccine, etc.

What’s different about emergency use approval?

Emergency use approval is different from the clinical trial data. The clinical trial data is collected over a longer period, and the results are published in scientific journals. Emergency use approval is given based on the available data and the regulatory authorities may give approval even if there is no clinical trial data.

What is the time frame for emergency use approval?

Emergency use approval can be given in a few days or weeks, depending on the available data and the regulatory authorities. The time frame can vary from country to country.

The emergency use approval is given to vaccines and other medicines that are intended for use in emergency situations, such as during a pandemic or a natural disaster. The approval is based on the available data and the regulatory authorities may give approval even if there is no clinical trial data.

How does Covid-19 get used in an emergency situation?

If the government official usually will provide the emergency use approval, then the vaccine will be given to the people who need it the most, such as healthcare workers, elderly people, etc.

What is the advantage of giving emergency use approval?

Giving emergency use approval can save lives in an emergency situation. The vaccine will be given to the people who need it the most, such as healthcare workers, elderly people, etc.

What are the challenges of giving emergency use approval?

Giving emergency use approval can be a challenge, as there may be questions about the safety and effectiveness of the vaccine. The regulatory authorities may need more data before giving approval.

Conclusion

Emergency use approval can be a useful tool during an emergency situation. It can save lives and help control the spread of the disease. However, it is important to ensure that the vaccine is safe and effective before giving approval.
