iPhonemobile operator offers pay hike after worker protest

The iPhone plant in Karnataka suspended work after pay talks failed to lead to a resolution.

“Nothing to do with the ongoing farmer movement,” said a union official.

This would remain a point of contention, the farmer leaders said.

States, especially Punjab, said they had the acquired right to organise the farmer movement at the state level. “We have stood by farmers from the beginning. It is our manifesto,” said BKC President Raminder Singh Pathania.

MHA and the central government, however, wanted to have a say in the arrangement of the Joint Forum of farmers.

“Government has given the option to three IPS officers to withdraw from the Centre where they were posted. They were asked to go to their respective states to work, but they did not.”

Two days later, the Calcutta High Court asked the Ministry of Home Affairs to follow up with the officers.

The government has not taken any action. It has neither reached out to them nor asked them to return to the Centre.

Karnataka’s minister turned his back on the farmer movement, after his proposal to continue the movement was rejected.

“arrests remain a grey area,” said a senior police officer.

The officer said the police had also collected “evidence” on the students who had been busted.

Manish Tripathi, who舭res to all the different laws the government had passed, said it was a “constitutional ploy”.

NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 12

According to data from Transporters’ Welfare Association (TWA), farmers have sent several thousand trucks along the Delhi-Jaipur highway, ahead of the farmers’ planned protest on Sunday.

A truck driver said, “We saw a truck that was stuck on the Rohtak road, say they are facing losses as neither raw material or finished goods are getting transported. There has been no impact on the supply chain so far, and we aren’t sending any more trucks because of the uncertainty.”

However, Pradeep Singhal, the general manager of Vijay Transporters’ Welfare Association, said, “There has been no impact on the supply chain, but we are not sending any more trucks because of the uncertainty.”

Singhal also added that the laborers are also finding it difficult to arrive at farms. He said, “Many transporters have stopped operating, and we are not sending any more trucks because of the uncertainty.”

On Saturday, a new truck or trolley kept reaching the Tikri border all day long. A farmer said, “We go back, a number of other trucks will replace us. There are many others from the same village who are planning to come and stay here.”

Another farmer said, “We are not going back, we will continue to stay here. We will come back with more people than I dropped,” he said. The bus, headed by Arvind Kumar (18), working as a labourer at a shoefactory and his family of 10. He and his family bought a tent from an nearby shop along the highway to spend Rs100-150 on toll...it’s a long way, he said.

Other farmers, who make ready to spend Rs100-150 on toll, also expressed their concerns. Some farmers, who are planning to come and stay here, said, “We will come back with more people than I dropped.”

Amandeep Singh (25), who reached the border with 10 family members, said it was a 10-hour journey. His family, consisting of a father, mother, and four children, came to Tikri from Patiala.

Singhal shared, “We will keep extending our support to farmers. It is a long battle, and we will keep supporting them.”

A farmer said, “We have not read the farm bills so far. We want to see the final version of the bill before taking any decision.”

In the meantime, the government has been working on a new law to provide security to farmers and prevent violence. The government has assured farmers that their concerns will be addressed in the new law, and they will be given a say in the decision-making process.

A farmer said, “We are not stopping until our demands are met. We will continue to stay here until the government agrees to our demands.”

After protest, Jamia puts exams on hold

Jamia Millia Islamia has put its exams on hold until further notice after the university’s exam portal crashed over the weekend.

In an announcement yesterday, the Vice-Chancellor said the university had put exams on hold "till further notice," adding that the exams would be held after the portal was fixed.

"The exams were being conducted online sitting in their homes," the announcement said.

"Students have been constantly updating us with issues and glitches, which we are trying to resolve," it said.

"We have informed the candidates to not panic as all efforts are being made to rectify the matter," it added.

The announcement comes after students from various universities in Delhi complained of laptop glitches, slow internet, and other problems during the exams.

Some students had complained that the exam portal was not loading, while others reported that they were unable to access their question papers.

Many students also reported that they were unable to submit their answer sheets on time due to technical issues.

Delhi Police has registered a case against the university for violating the Delhi University Act.

On Friday, the university had said that it would continue with the exams even if the portal was not working.

"We are conducting the exams as per the schedule," the university had said.

Students had also alleged that the university had not provided them with adequate facilities and support.

"We are committed to conducting the exams as per the schedule," the university had said.

Some students had also threatened to go on strike if their demands were not met.

On Sunday, the university had announced that it would conduct the exams in a few more cities.

"In view of the large number of students who have complained about the functioning of the portal, we have decided to conduct the exams in a few more cities," the university had said.

The students had also demanded that the exams be held in a fair manner and that the university should provide them with adequate facilities.

With farmers rejecting the government’s offer and deciding to continue their protest against the farm laws, The Sunday Express meets some of the farmers camping at Delhi’s borders, and visits their farms and families back home, to find a shared concern—a sense of despair over falling crop prices.

When asked why he is camped at the border, he says, “It is plying two reasons. One, it is a protest against the new laws and two, it is for saving my land which has been involved in these laws. It is the developmental period of the crops. Their life is totally affected and they are here to protect their lands.”

He is also concerned about the impact of the new laws on his land. “I have 15 acres of land, 7 acres of which is under lease. It is very risky for the farmer to lease land as they have to pay twice to the landlord and twice to the buyer. This is a big threat for us.”

He says, “The harvest season is over, but we have not sold our produce yet. We are waiting for the mandis to open.”

Narpinder Singh says that the new laws will further increase the prices of the crops, making it difficult for farmers to sell their produce. “The new laws will make it difficult for us to sell our produce at a fair price. We are worried that the corporates will not buy our produce at a fair price.”

The new normal’s scary

One can conclude that the most vulnerable to this UP is two young people falling in love and imprinting: Hence it is engaging the attention of the chief minister himself. FAAF Bundelkhand, there is a severe problem.

Surgency of Pride

Every change in life isnewsworthy. Every change is newsworthy. When 17 of Pakistan’s board posted in London companies are occupied by women, when students couldn’t enjoy college life, or when we couldn’t experience a normal life in the last 12 months, these are not just anomalies but are part of the systemic issues that our society is facing. Moreover, the lack of representation of women in the workforce is a significant issue that needs to be addressed. In summary, women have been disproportionately affected by the pandemic, and the systemic issues that have contributed to this are now being highlighted.

Chilling facts

Some other new normal things which made the voice of the people not being heard.

The response of Dalit patriarchy also shows how much of a position they hold in the society.

Dalits, Harijans, and Adivasis are a part of the Indian society, and their rights have been suppressed for a long time. The recent incidents of violence against Dalits in different parts of the country have highlighted the need for better protection and support for these marginalized communities. The government should take steps to ensure that the voices of Dalits and other marginalized communities are heard and that their rights are protected. This is important not only for the social and economic development of these communities but also for the overall stability and progress of the country.

Dalits and the oppressions within

The real problem with his farmlaws was that they were not only intended to benefit the rich but also to suppress the voice of the people. If the Prime Minister truly believes that democracy is about speaking and listening, then he should give the voice of the people a chance to be heard. This includes the voices of Dalits, Adivasis, and other marginalized communities who have been systematically suppressed for a long time. If the Prime Minister wants to achieve the goal of a “New India”, then he must take steps to ensure that the voices of the marginalized communities are heard and that their rights are protected. This is important not only for the social and economic development of these communities but also for the overall stability and progress of the country.
The Pfizer Global Supply Kalamazoo manufacturing plant in Michigan was expected to supply up to 25 million doses before the end of the year, and 100 million total doses by March.

The announcement kicks off a wave of submissions to get the vaccine into Puerto Rican pharmacies and reduces the pressure on the federal government to ship vaccine to the island. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Puerto Rico has been sending vaccine to the mainland despite its own supply, a move that has prompted criticism.

The news comes as the US continues to grapple with a persistent surge of COVID-19 cases, hospitalizations, and deaths. With a vaccination rate of around 50%, the country is still far from achieving herd immunity. However, the availability of the vaccine in Puerto Rico is seen as a positive step forward in the efforts to control the pandemic.

Meanwhile, other countries around the world are also stepping up their vaccination efforts. As of now, several countries have administered over 100 million doses, with some countries reaching vaccination rates over 50%. The goal of vaccinating the world’s population remains elusive, but progress is being made as more vaccines become available.

Overall, the news on the availability of the vaccine in Puerto Rico is a significant development in the ongoing battle against COVID-19. It is hoped that this move will encourage other countries to step up their vaccination efforts and bring the world closer to achieving herd immunity.

Play is serious business. A peek into the world of toy start-ups in India

Story by Panamoni Chakraborty

The toys on display would have smelt of plastic. But when Meeta Sharma Gupta, 43, returned to India from the US, and started Go Goggles, there was no smell of plastic. "The toys were made of wood," she says. "They were natural and organic and that was the main difference from the toys we used to buy in the West.

"You play with toy stones, with wooden parts, and make your own toy as you go along. I was struck by the idea that toys can be different," Gupta says. "They can be made of natural materials and be organic and environmentally friendly."

Gupta launched Go Goggles in 2015, and the company has since produced a range of toys that are focused on natural materials and organic construction. The company has also launched a line of educational games that are focused on science, technology, engineering, and math.

"We think that children should be encouraged to play with natural materials and natural toys," Gupta says. "We want to encourage children to learn through play and to create their own toys using natural materials."
