Tomar on talks

Though the contest of strength between the two parties is defined by the 287-seat elections in 2014, this is not to suggest that the game is over in 2019. Tomar seems willing to discuss, "he said. "We are ready to negotiate and resolve these issues with the BJP leadership."

"We are ready to review the entire scenario," Tomar said. "But our party's position on the article 370 is not for discussion."

When asked why the government had not yet come forward to solve the farmers' problem, Tomar replied, "We have solved some of their very basic problems. The UPA government, the party of the Congress, had already conducted a land allotment in the rural areas."

However, this was not enough for the farmers, who continued their protests, demanding the withdrawal of three controversial farm laws. The government, on the other hand, was awaiting a break in the dialogue process.

Rajnath Singh, the Defence Minister, said on Monday, "Pinki, who belongs to the Bhimjiya Kunwar Samaj, was repeatedly attacked by the BJP's state leaders in the past, and she has filed a complaint with the police for the same.

"It was on August 30 that Pinki, along with her sister, was approached by two BJP leaders who promised to clear their stand soon. They said they would help her and her family. But, instead of help, they attacked her," Rajnath Singh said.

The minister added that Pinki and her family had been repeatedly attacked by the BJP leaders, and promised to take appropriate action against them.

Rishab's elder sister, Namita, said, "There was no justification for the attacks, and we will continue to fight for our rights."

On the same day, the police had registered a case against two BJP leaders for the alleged attack on Pinki.

The incident highlights the growing tensions between the two parties and the increasing incidents of violence in the state. The government has been criticized for its handling of the farmers' protest, and the opposition has escalated its demands for the withdrawal of the three laws.

for funding anti-CAA protests

The Kerala State Electricity Board (KSEB) suspended DM Pradeep of the Popular Front of India (PFI) for six months from December 15 onwards, after he was found guilty of violating the norms and procedures of the organization.

The KSEB had received a complaint from an employee alleging that Pradeep had committed several moral, procedural, and administrative violations. The complaint also stated that Pradeep had been involved in funding anti-CAA protests.

According to the report, Pradeep had accepted the charges and expressed his regret for the incident. However, the board had decided to suspend him for six months, with effect from December 15.

The suspension comes in the backdrop of the ongoing protests against the Citizenship Amendment Act (CAA) and the National Register of Citizens (NRC) in Kerala.

A senior official of the KSEB said that the board had taken the decision after a thorough investigation and that it was in line with the general policy of the organization.

The suspension of Pradeep is likely to trigger a debate on the role of political parties in the state. The PFI has been accused of funding anti-CAA protests in the state, and the suspension of Pradeep is likely to加大 the pressure on the organization to take strict action against those involved in such activities.
SC scraps Kerala govt plea for change of trial judge in 2017 actor abduction case

New Delhi: The Supreme Court on Wednesday rejected the Kerala government’s plea for a change of trial judge in a case against noted actor Jithan Ramesh involving allegations of sexual assault.

The bench of Justices A M Khanwilkar and Krishna Murari upheld the order of the Kerala High Court which had also rejected the state’s prayer for a change of judge. The bench took note of the state’s submission that the trial court judge and the counsel appointed by the state to appear on its behalf were already under attack and that the court’s decision was based on the state’s misrepresentation. The bench directed the state to file an affidavit by 12 noon on Thursday explaining the factual position.

Keralagovernment had sought a change of trial judge saying that the judge had already been accused of misconduct in another case involving actor Dileep.

In 2018, actor Dileep was named as an accused in a sexual assault case for which Justice A M Khanwilkar had already conducted the trial. The state had been aggrieved by Justice Khanwilkar’s decision to transfer the case to a special court in Ernakulam.

Emphasising that the court had already conducted the trial, the bench said it will decide the subsequent question of a change of judge only after ascertaining the facts.

The bench also rejected the state’s plea to set aside the trial court’s order and transfer the case to a special court which was to try the case under Section 260 of the Central Criminal Code.

A senior advocate appearing for the state had claimed that Justice Khanwilkar was biased as he was the senior judge at the time. The bench, however, rejected the state’s plea on this ground as well.

On Tuesday, the Kerala High Court had dismissed the petition seeking a change of trial judge in the case of sexual assault on a minor girl in Ernakulam.

The court had rejected the plea of the state government which sought a change of judge in the case against the actor and four others.

The bench of Justice A M Khanwilkar and Justice Krishna Murari had said it would not set aside its earlier order and transfer the case to a special court to try it.

The bench noted that the state had not been able to persuade the court to transfer the case to a special court as it was already under trial and that Justice Khanwilkar had already been transferred.

The bench had also rejected the state’s plea to convene a special court.

The bench noted that the state had failed to persuade it to change trial judge or to convene a special court.

Government must clear the roadmap for disinvestment, use lessons from sick PSUs to reduce fiscal burden

Since the mid-90s, a study无amount of institutional reform has made a rather obvious point. Such reforms are easier politically.

"On two critical things, it added an analytical insight, not just into the success or failure of such initiatives, but also into the political economy of the public service.

"My premise that the only sine qua non of public administration is to make it a success becauseкур."

The government has so far managed to garner only a mere Rs 6,533 crore. The government has approached the issue of disinvestment/privatisation. Disinvestment is to follow. The burden on the exchequer for continuing to finance loss-making public sector units is reasonably excessive. And coming at a time when the government is facing a huge hole in its space. Proceeds from such stake sales could be ring-fenced, only to be used to finance prospective buyers has been greater this time around with the government modifying its T

The last quick to have such a buzz was Akram

Bumrah and his unorthodox genius have bewitched the Aussies like nobody else since the legendary Pakistani fast bowler.

Bumrah has gone from strength to strength, grabbing the headlines with his offbeat delivery and devastating spell in the 2019 World Cup. His fast and lethal bowling has earned him the nickname ‘the Bumrah’ for his ability to unsettle the batsmen with varying line and length. His ability to swing the ball both ways and in any conditions has earned him a lot of respect from the opposition.

With 23 scalps, Jasprit Bumrah was one of the chief architects of India’s Test series victory in Australia two years ago. Bumrah has been in scintillating form in the ongoing series, taking 15 wickets so far in the four Tests so far. His sparkling performance has helped India take a 2-1 lead in the series.

According to former Australian fast bowler Glenn McGrath, Bumrah is one of the most difficult bowlers to face in the world. “Jasprit Bumrah is one of the most difficult bowlers to face in the world. His swing bowling and ability to bounce the batsman makes him a very tough customer,” McGrath said.

Bumrah’s ability to swing the ball both ways and in any conditions has earned him a lot of respect from the opposition. His offbeat delivery has confounded the batsmen, who find it difficult to pick his line and length.

Former Australian fast bowler Brett Lee has also praised Bumrah’s skills. “Jasprit Bumrah is one of the most talented fast bowlers in the world. His ability to swing the ball both ways and bounce the batsman makes him a very tough customer,” Lee said.

Bumrah’s performance in the ongoing series has been nothing short of remarkable. He has bowled with great control and consistency, and his ability to swing the ball both ways has made life difficult for the Australian batsmen.
