Singhu border to get free WiFi hotspots so far, farmers can talk to families back home

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE

The AAP Will install free WiFi hotspots at the Singhu border for farmers to talk to their families. The party said it was the AAP that had first proposed setting up of free hotspots.

The installation of the hotspots will begin on Monday, said a party leader.

“We have decided to provide free WiFi hotspots for the benefit of farmers,” the leader said.

He said the party had re-iterated its stand on the issue of free hotspots.

“A person needs three things to live: food, kapda (clothes), and sewa (work),” said the leader.

“Sewa means to serve, which is internet. Our farmers haven’t been paid in months. But instead of doing microplanning in a camp, they can video call families back home,” he said.

The party said it had made the proposal to the government.

“We have given a huge opportunity to be part of the training programme. It was an insightful experience,” the leader said.

He said the party would keep an eye on the Centre and state level, and share experiences from our training programme, we have to do something about Covid-19, he said.

3,800 HEALTHCARE WORKERS TRAINED

City prepares for Covid shot, those at frontlines say ready

ASHIMA SAYANA

NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 29

Delhi's 3,800 healthcare workers were trained on how to administer Covid vaccine on Saturday for the first phase of the country-wide inoculation drive. The city has 133 centres, which will be operational from December 29.

The Union Minister of Health and Family Welfare Dr Harsh Vardhan also reviewed the training of 3,800 volunteers.

“Training was given on how to handle the vaccine. The volunteers were given instructions on how to handle pre-registration process, waiting area, a vaccination room, a waiting room and an observation room. The training was conducted over two days. On the second day, the training focused on the cold chain management,” Dr Vardhan said.

A Delhi government official said, “A local authority will receive the vaccine on Wednesday at 10 am and we will distribute it to the centres. The vaccination process will be completed in phases. The vaccine will be stored in a temperature-controlled environment.”

Dr Sanjiv Khanna, chairman, the Delhi Vaccination Programme, said the volunteers would be trained to handle the cold chain as well.

“Every person who is going to be vaccinated will have a digital card which will be scanned. We have trained all the volunteers on this process,” he said.

The government has arranged for the volunteers to undergo a mock drill at home and then they were trained on the spot.

The volunteers were made familiar with the delivery of the vaccine and its storage in the cold chain. They were also trained in various components of the vaccination process.

The volunteers were also trained on how to maintain the cold chain, how to handle the vaccine, and how to create an awareness among people about the vaccine.

MP Cabinet clears Ordinance to stop forced conversions

FIRST CASE UNDER NEW LAW IN UTTARAKHAND
3 months after Hindu woman converted to marry, couple among four people booked

Adityanath, expressing "deep disapproval" and concern at the use of the Ordinance, which stipulates a jail term for religious conversion against the will of the accused, said it would become evident that, in such cases, the burden of proof would rest on the accused. “It is widely seen that the accused are unable to prove their innocence, and there is no evidence to show that the accused were under pressure or coercion to accept the new religion,” he said. “The ordinance will not be implemented, and those who act against it will be taken to account.”

In today’s world, businesses like every other activity or social responsibility or build the next generation of sportspeople by training the youth or empowering women by training the youth or empowering women can play a role in mitigating carbon footprints. We also actively give back to our communities. Businesses should take a lead in embracing corporate social responsibility initiatives in line with the UN SDGs. Over the last few years, we have seen substantial reductions in India’s carbon footprint. By 2030, India aims to make renewable energy the backbone of its energy system.

Playing Mediator

Delhi NCR is yet to identify vulnerable populations in the disaster in the past few years, we have seen extreme cold days. Through this initiative, we are also engaging with a range of stakeholders that you are partnering with us. According to top officials, they decided to marry any one of the accused on the grounds of forced conversion, and approached a court to get the case quashed and to get the police to accept the certificate of her new name.

How do you see this initiative in the future? Is there any major stakeholder that you are partnering with us? According to top officials, they decided to marry any one of the accused on the grounds of forced conversion, and approached a court to get the case quashed and to get the police to accept the certificate of her new name.

Why do you think this initiative is important? We strongly believe that the initiative is important for several reasons. Firstly, it is a small step towards creating a more inclusive and equitable society. Secondly, it helps in creating awareness among the masses about the importance of protecting the rights of women and children. Lastly, it is a step towards creating a more just and equal society. We believe that this initiative will have a positive impact on society and help in creating a more inclusive and equitable society.

Clashes break out in Indore village as Rahul, hindu outcasts chauvinistic onslaught on mosque

A vehicle was being overturned during the clash. (Sagar Tavale)

"We were totally surprised by this," said Sushil Dhadphale, Additional District Magistrate of Indore. "This is totally against the law and we are investigating the matter." The police have registered a case of rioting and damage to property.

The incident is the latest in a series of clashes between Hindu and Muslim communities in the state. In recent months, there have been reports of violence in several areas, with Hindu mobs accusing Muslims of spreading communal tension.

In response, the government has announced a series of measures, including the deployment of additional police personnel and the imposition of a curfew in some areas. The state government has also urged the public to maintain peace and refrain from any acts of violence.

Meanwhile, the Hindu Mahasabha, a Hindutva group, has said that it will not tolerate any violation of Hindu sentiments and will take strong action if such incidents occur again.

The potential of tourism can never be underestimated in any economy. Realising the sector’s vast offerings, both directly and indirectly, to its economy, the Government of India has launched its national tourism policy 2020, aiming at unlocking private investments and generating new jobs. For the first time, the state has a formal tourism policy to promote tourism in the state. Under this policy, the government has identified several areas for the promotion of tourism, including cultural tourism, eco-tourism, adventure tourism, and health tourism. The state has also identified several projects for the development of tourism infrastructure, including the construction of tourist destinations, the development of tourism facilities, and the promotion of tourism as a growth industry.

The Jharkhand government is committed to ensuring that tourism becomes a significant contributor to the state’s economy. To achieve this goal, the government will continue to work closely with the private sector and other stakeholders to promote tourism in the state.

It is the government’s priority to improve civic amenities and basic facilities for the people of the state irrespective of whether they live in cities or villages. Since we were voted to power, we have been trying our level best to address public issues and focus on bridging the gap between the government and the people of state.

Dear Editor,

Is there any point in writing editorials when the editorial page of a newspaper is not entitled to any kind of response? Is it not the editor's job to decide what is written, even if that might be considered as exclusive opinion? Do you think that the community is entitled to be close-minded?

MSP-APMC system benefits a minority of farmers. To help small and marginal farmers, right approach is through Farmer Producer Organisations, not APMC mandis

From Plate to Plough by Ashok Galati

In India, the MSP (Minimum Support Price) system operates through the APMC (Agricultural Produce Marketing Committee) mandis. Though this system was introduced in 1966, it has been plagued with several issues over the years, especially for small and marginal farmers who are the majority of the farming community. To understand the current state of the MSP-APMC system, we need to look at various factors.

One of the primary reasons for the failure of the MSP-APMC system for small farmers is the huge variation in MSPs across different mandis. This variation is due to the fact that APMC mandis are self-regulated and the MSPs are determined locally, which can lead to significant discrepancies in prices. Additionally, the APMC mandis are owned and managed by the state governments, which can lead to corruption and hoarding by state officials.

Small farmers are also affected by the APMC mandis’ tendency to buy crops at lower prices, leading to a gap between the MSP and the price paid by the mandis. This gap results in small farmers losing out on the full benefit of the MSP system.

Moreover, the APMC mandis tend to buy crops in bulk, which can lead to a lack of competition and result in lower prices for small farmers. The large-scale buying by APMC mandis can also lead to the monopolization of the market, further reducing the bargaining power of small farmers.

The MSP-APMC system benefits a minority of farmers, with large-scale traders and middlemen profiting significantly from it. The majority of small farmers, who are the backbone of the Indian agriculture sector, are often left out of the benefits of the system.

To address these issues, a right approach is required to benefit small and marginal farmers. One such approach is the establishment of Farmer Producer Organisations (FPOs). FPOs can help small farmers by providing them with a collective bargaining power, enabling them to negotiate better prices with the APMC mandis.

FPOs can also provide several services to farmers, including credit facilities, storage facilities, and insurance. These services can help small farmers manage risks and improve their overall income. In addition, FPOs can also help in the promotion of value-added products, leading to higher incomes for farmers.

The establishment of FPOs and their role in implementing the right approach towards the MSP-APMC system can significantly benefit small and marginal farmers in India. These organisations can help in promoting fair trade practices, reducing the monopoly of large traders, and ensuring that the full benefit of the MSP system is enjoyed by all farmers.

In conclusion, the MSP-APMC system benefits a minority of farmers, and a right approach is required to ensure that small and marginal farmers benefit from it. This can be achieved through the establishment of FPOs, which can provide several services to farmers and help in promoting fair trade practices.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Outrage misses the point: No community is entitled to be close-minded

I read with interest the letter you have published on the issue of farmer protests in India. However, I believe that the letter lacks an important perspective. Instead of focusing on the farmers' grievances, the letter seems to overlook the broader socio-economic context of the situation.

The current protest movement is not an isolated incident but a reflection of the prolonged neglect and exploitation faced by Indian farmers. The government has been slow to respond to the farmers' demands, leading to widespread anger and frustration. The letter's failure to address this context misses the point.

In my opinion, the government needs to take concrete steps to address the farmers' demands and find a long-term solution to the agricultural crisis in India. This includes providing better access to credit, support for agricultural diversification, and improved marketing services for farmers.

I urge you to publish this letter and encourage the community to reflect on the broader context of the farmers' protest movement. Let us work towards a solution that benefits all stakeholders in the agricultural sector.

Sincerely,

Lessons from a pandemic

The Covid-19 pandemic has brought rare scientific attention to topics related to healthcare, and India’s response has underlined its existing scientific capabilities. In 2021, the country can look forward to improvements in vaccine research, among other scientific achievements.

Amish Tripathi

Amish Tripathi is best known for his novels, especially the Shiva Trilogy. He has been awarded with the Padma Bhushan in 2015 and the Jnanpith Award in 2016. He is also known for his efforts in promoting Jainism and his work on environmental issues.

Amish Tripathi has written extensively on the topic of pandemics, including the Covid-19 pandemic. He has been critical of the government’s response to the pandemic and has called for greater transparency and accountability. In his book “The Immortal Vermilion Bird,” he explores the idea of a pandemic as a metaphor for the human condition, and how it can be used to understand the complexities of life and death.

In his recent work, he has written about the pandemic in a way that is both poignant and powerful. He has highlighted the ways in which the pandemic has exposed the fragility of human society, and the need for greater cooperation and unity in the face of global challenges.

Tripathi is known for his ability to write in a way that is both engaging and thought-provoking. His work has been widely read and has been translated into many languages. He is a key figure in the Indian literary scene, and his work continues to be widely discussed and debated.
