2020 started and ending on a stormy note: 2021 may be different. The government could face protests on the street, and hard-fought Assembly elections could raise political tempests. Major diplomatic challenges lie ahead. For the Opposition, 2021 could be a make-or-break year.

Donald Trump's tenure has been marked by a series of political, economic, and military events that have had a significant impact on the world stage. With the US President's departure, the world is now looking towards new leaders and policies to shape the future of international relations.

The Biden administration has already indicated its intention to re-engage with multilateral institutions and to work closely with allies and partners. This could have a significant impact on bilateral relations and international governance.

A major challenge for the Biden administration will be to address the issue of climate change, which is expected to remain a top priority. The administration is expected to rejoin the Paris Agreement, and work towards reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

The US will also have to address the issue of economic inequality, with the Biden administration expected to propose new policies to address income inequality and poverty.

The US will also face a number of internal challenges, including the possibility of a government shutdown and the ongoing debate over the size of the stimulus package.

In addition to these challenges, the US will also have to deal with ongoing tensions with China, Russia, and other nations. The Biden administration will have to carefully navigate these relationships to ensure the long-term stability of the US and its allies.

The world is watching as the US embarks on this new chapter. The US will play a key role in shaping the world order, and its actions will have a direct impact on global affairs.

The Biden administration has already made it clear that it will prioritize diplomacy, multilateralism, and global cooperation. The US will work closely with its allies and partners to address the world's most pressing issues.

SHRUTI'S FAREWELL, 1922, a violent mob attack on the first day of the Non- Coercive Peace March, led to the first fatality—Madhu Das. Mahatma Gandhi, who was an eyewitness to the event, wrote in his autobiography: “The violence had been provoked by the police. The mob that attacked Madhu Das in the early hours of the morning was a small group.”

Despite communions around the world that have overseen a steady shift away from the idea of universal rights, discussions around violence and disarmament, particularly in the South Asian context, continue to be fraught with violence and discrimination. In this context, the question of the relationship between violence and disarmament is crucial. It is often assumed that violence is a necessary tool for achieving disarmament, while disarmament is seen as a means to reduce violence. However, this simplistic assumption overlooks the complex interplay between violence and disarmament, and the need to address both issues in a comprehensive manner.

Firstly, violence and disarmament are not inherently linked. Disarmament can be achieved through peaceful means, such as the negotiation and signing of agreements, or through the implementation of international law. Violence, on the other hand, is often used as a tool to achieve political or economic goals.

Secondly, the relationship between violence and disarmament is not always clear-cut. Sometimes, violence is used to prevent disarmament, while other times, disarmament is used to prevent violence. This complexity makes it difficult to develop effective strategies to address both issues.

Finally, the relationship between violence and disarmament is not always reciprocal. Sometimes, violence can lead to disarmament, while other times, disarmament can lead to violence. This complexity makes it difficult to develop effective strategies to address both issues.

In conclusion, the relationship between violence and disarmament is complex and not always straightforward. It is important to recognize this complexity in order to develop effective strategies to address both issues. This recognition requires a shift away from simplistic assumptions and towards a more nuanced understanding of the relationship between violence and disarmament.

Finally, any discussion on violence and disarmament must take into account the diverse perspectives and cultural contexts of different societies. Violence and disarmament are not universal concepts, and their meanings and implications vary across different cultures and contexts.

In summary, the relationship between violence and disarmament is complex and not always straightforward. It is important to recognize this complexity in order to develop effective strategies to address both issues. This recognition requires a shift away from simplistic assumptions and towards a more nuanced understanding of the relationship between violence and disarmament.

Of trials, tribulations and triumphs

Rahane and Ashwin have often been at the receiving end of trigger-happy selection. Melbourne was vindication for their patience, as they took a depleted side to one of India's greatest away Test wins, TUSHAR BHADURI with

Rahane's rollercoaster

Finding inner strength

VIRAT KOHLI might have been the centre of attention in Adelaide, but the Indian captain was not the only one to come under scrutiny. Ajinkya Rahane, the outh batter who had struggled to find form in the recent past, was also under the scanner. However, the left-handed batsman put in a man-of-the-match performance to silence his critics.

Phase of setbacks

Once rated as one of the most promising players in Indian cricket, Rahane had been struggling with form ever since the Australia tour in 2020-21. His poor showing in the series was clear evidence of his inability to translate good starts into big hours.

"I think we all hold such high standards," Ashwin said on Wednesday. "I think we all feel that we are good enough to get to the top. We want to go on the top of the chart from the start."

The Melbourne hundred was only Ajinkya Rahane's second since he last appeared for India in the Test against New Zealand, many thought set back clearly affected Rahane's Test game as Rahane's suitability to the shorter formats.

"I've sort of let him go. I've sort of let him do his thing," Kohli said. "He's been consistent for a long time now."

What did Rahane say?

"The discipline, you know, research a big thing. When 'Rahane' comes on, let's not forget that he's made 500 runs, 600 runs, 700 runs and all that, and he's done that the hard way."

"I think some people have very high standards, and I also do," Kohli said. "Some people have to be the best from the very start."

After Melbourne

Rahane may have had a rocky period with the bat, but his performance in the last Test was a welcome sight. His innings helped India secure a 13-match Test series victory.

Ashwin finds turnaround

Silencing doubts

"I don't know what to say. What happened at the end of the day? We scored 130-odd."

"I don't think I've hit a century in a Test match in a while," Ashwin said. "I've been struggling a bit in Test cricket."

"For a long time Ashwin has suffered not from injuries but from a lack of form."

World not at their feet

Teenage dreams of playing in a youth World Cup in front of home crowds lie in tatters for 27 youngsters after cancellation of the FIFA U-17 Women’s tournament.

With FIFA deciding to cancel the U-17 World Cup, India saw one of its 27 promising girls, who would have been the reward for her mother who stiches clothes in the village.

It has been a year like no other for Indian football. The love for football kept us going all year, no matter how far off our dreams were. There has been encouragement from our coaches and some ups and downs. As a goal keeper, it would have been a special honour to play a world cup. We used to dream of playing in front of the fans. But this has been the disappointment of not being able to play in front of home crowds. While playing against any international team at an event is motivating, playing in front of our fans in a world cup cannot be matched by any other experience," shared Priyanka, who hails from Bhambhewa in Jharkhand.

“Hailing from Bhambhewa village in Jind district, the first-choice custumerclothes in the village earn a living. They would’ve been the reward for her mother who stiches clothes in the village. This has been the biggest disappointment in my life. I was interested in athletics but my mother wanted me to play football. It’s been a special feeling to play in a world cup. We were working on developing passes, it’s been a very nice, shares Kumar."

The boys kept coming. A huge effort by Wagner kept the tourists 71-3 but a 165-run partnership between Fawad Alam and Mohammad Rizwan put Pakistan on course."

Rival captains Williamson and Rizwan praised Wagner for keeping the Kiwis in the game. "He was going off and having an injection, but then he came back and bowled us out. It was kind of unique for all of us," Williamson said. "We appreciate the doctors and medics who treated him and put him at no expense. We know that the guy has no time to spare."

New Zealand's debutant Wagner, who had been touted as a special talent ahead of the tournament, has indeed been in impressive form with the ball."

On Wagner's bowling, Pakistan skipper Babar Azam said: "He bowled us out and we were happy with 30 runs."
