West Bengal: Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee’s scheduled address at the Oxford Union was cancelled at the last moment after the debating society told her that it had invitations from “unfair individuals.”

The GOVERNOR of Uttar Pradesh has recently promulgated an ordinance to deal with the phenomenon of illegal conversions in the state. The UP government argues that the ordinance is necessary to protect the interest of the people of the state and to prevent the misuse of the freedom of conscience. However, critics argue that the ordinance is a violation of the fundamental rights guaranteed by the Constitution. The ordinance makes it a criminal offence to convert an individual to another religion without the person's consent. The designated officer is authorized to seize and confiscate any property, events, things, or documents related to the offence without a warrant. The person accused of committing the offence is presumed to be guilty. The ordinance has been criticized by various organizations, including the Supreme Court, which has expressed concern about the potential for misuse and abuse of the power. The court has directed the government to ensure that the ordinance is not used to coerce or intimidate individuals into changing their religion. The court has also emphasized the importance of respecting the rights of individuals to choose their religion freely. The government has defended the ordinance, arguing that it is necessary to protect the interests of the state and to prevent the misuse of the freedom of conscience. The court has also directed the government to ensure that the ordinance is not used to coercively convert individuals to another religion.

TODAY DECEMBER 3, is the annual International Day of Persons with Disabilities established by the United Nations in 1992 to focus on the "promotion and protection of the full and equal participation and integration in society of persons with disabilities in all aspects of political, social, economic and cultural life at the national and international level."

By the start of disabilities with respect to how we should treat or react to them is the necessity of the situation of persons with disabilities in the context of the environment in which they are found. Child protection and empowerment is all about ensuring that they are able to participate fully and freely in all aspects of life, including political, social, economic and cultural life, at the national and international level.

As the founder of Adani Group, to the World Economic Forum in Davos last year, he said, "I believe in the power of inclusive growth." This phrase, he explained, means that businesses and economies must be built around the principles of inclusivity and sustainability.

Why should Indian agriculture be liberalised when in most countries governments subsidise it?

Christophe Jaffrelot and Hemal Thakker

On September 27, 2021, President Rahul Gandhi transitioned to an Rs 2,000 crores fund (equivalent to about US$300 million) to be funded by tea, coffee and tobacco farmers to support them in times of distress. This fund will come into effect once the Government approves the proposal of a specific scheme under the Pradhan Mantri Fasal Bima Yojana (PMFBY) which ensures a minimum price for agricultural produce.

The fund, which is expected to cover around 11.7 million farmers, is being proposed to help farmers in times of distress, particularly in the wake of the recent drought and COVID-19 pandemic. The fund will provide financial assistance to farmers in the form of cash payments or in-kind benefits in case of crop loss or income shortfall.

In this context, the Nehru-Gandhi family (or the Congress party) has been accused of pulling the country towards economic growth. This has led to calls for a change in the political landscape, with some arguing for a more inclusive and sustainable approach to governance.

The idea of subsidising agriculture is not new in India. In fact, it has been a part of the country's economic policy since independence. However, the extent and scope of the subsidy have been under occasional criticism, with some arguing that it is too generous and not sufficient to support farmers adequately.

In conclusion, the idea of subsidising agriculture is a complex and multifaceted issue that requires careful consideration. While it is crucial to support farmers, it is equally important to ensure that the subsidy is targeted and efficient. Whether India's farmers can be better served by liberalising agriculture or continuing with the current system of subsidies remains to be seen. However, it is clear that a more inclusive and sustainable approach to governance is essential for the country's long-term growth and development.

A study published in the journal Nature on Tuesday has underscored the importance of rehabilitation in improving the lives of people suffering from disabilities. According to the study, by 2019, 2.41 billion people could benefit from therapies such as physical and occupational therapy, speech and language therapy at some point during their lives.

The study found that a significant number of people live with disabilities and that rehabilitation can play a crucial role in improving their quality of life. The research, which was conducted by a team of experts from the World Health Organization (WHO), emphasized that rehabilitation is a key component of comprehensive health care.

In the case of the Supreme Court, the Attorney General has asked whether the court can order a contempt of court against a person who was not a party to the original case but who had purported to be acting as a lawyer to represent a party. The Attorney General has argued that such a person is not entitled to claim immunity from contempt proceedings.

The court has rejected the Attorney General’s argument and has held that the rule of law and the administration of justice cannot be undermined. The court has also emphasized that a person who misrepresents himself as a lawyer can be punished for contempt of court.

The court has ordered the Attorney General to appear before it on a future date to explain his position further.

In the UK, a landmark case has been heard to determine whether air pollution contributed to the death of a young girl. Ella Adoo Kissi-Debrah, who lived in southeast London, died of acute respiratory failure as a result of severe asthma attacks. The case has highlighted the importance of addressing air pollution and the need for stronger regulations to protect public health.

The court ruled that air pollution contributed to Ella’s death and ordered the government to take steps to reduce air pollution levels. The case has been hailed as a significant victory for public health and has set a precedent for future cases.

In India, the government has announced a significant increase in the budget allocation for rehabilitation. This comes on the heels of a study published in Nature that estimated that 2.41 billion people could benefit from rehabilitation therapies in the next decade.

A 12.4-meter optical telescope at the Roque de los Muchachos Observatory on La Palma, Spain, fell off its mount on Monday, according to the Spanish Astronomical Centre.

The telescope, which was part of the La Palma Observatory, is used for astronomical research and educational purposes. It was built by the Max Planck Institute for Astronomy in Heidelberg, Germany, and was commissioned in 1998.

The telescope's collapse was caused by a combination of factors, including high winds and the weight of the telescope itself. The observatory has been closed until further notice, and the cause of the collapse is under investigation.

President opposes bill

KHERSHEED HASSAN

MAY 17, 2022

Iran’s President Hassan Rouhani has opposed a bill in the country’s parliament that would suspend UN arms inspections and credits the West with saving the country’s nuclear program.

The bill, which has been introduced by the country’s conservative MPs, would suspend inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) in Iran. The president’s opposition comes after the IAEA issued a report last month that found Iran had violated several provisions of the 2015 nuclear deal.

Rouhani said on Tuesday that the bill was a “vigorous” response to the West’s “misconduct” in the nuclear deal, which he said was “a historic opportunity” for the country.

The president also warned that Iran would not continue to comply with the 2015 deal if the inspections were suspended.

JERUSALEM, DECEMBER 2

The Israeli cabinet on Monday approved a proposal to fire Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who has been charged with fraud and breach of trust.

The proposal, which was submitted by the attorney general, would allow Netanyahu to temporarily step down as prime minister and return to his seat in the Knesset, the country’s parliament.

The proposal was approved by a 66-34 vote, with the opposition parties voting against it. The proposal will now be submitted to the Knesset, which is expected to vote on it next week.

The Ethics Committee of the Knesset had previously recommended that Netanyahu be disqualified from holding public office, but the proposal will allow him to continue as prime minister until the Knesset votes on the matter.

Afghan govt, Taliban reach breakthrough deal even as fighting shows no let-up for substantive talks

The Afghanistan government and the Taliban on Wednesday reached a deal on key issues that could allow negotiations to restart, according to the government.

The deal was reached after months of talks, and it includes agreement on a future political framework and a roadmap for the withdrawal of foreign forces.

The announcement comes after the Afghan government announced that it had reached a deal with the Taliban on key issues related to the formation of a new government.

The two sides have been in talks since last year, with the Taliban demanding a say in the government and the government insisting on the Taliban's withdrawal.

The deal is a significant breakthrough in the long-running Afghan conflict and could pave the way for a political solution to the conflict.

The Taliban have been fighting the Afghan government since 2001, and the conflict has claimed the lives of tens of thousands of civilians.

The deal comes as the Taliban have been making gains in the country, and the government has been struggling to hold onto power.

The deal includes provisions for the formation of a new government, a roadmap for the withdrawal of foreign forces, and the release of prisoners.

The agreement also includes provisions for the protection of human rights and civil liberties, and for the establishment of an independent judiciary.

The deal is a significant step forward in the peace process, and it is hoped that it will lead to a reduction in violence and an end to the conflict.

The agreement is the result of months of negotiations between the government and the Taliban, and it was announced in a joint statement by both sides.

The statement said that the agreement had been reached after "long and hard negotiations" and that it was a "historic moment" for Afghanistan.

The two sides also agreed to work together to create a "peaceful and stable" Afghanistan, and to work towards the "full and permanent reduction of violence."

The quarter ended September 30, 2020, saw a significant rise in bank敁idities. The efforts of banks to increase profitability and manage non-performing assets (NPAs) have yielded positive results.

Many banks have sharply raised their provisioning levels. This has helped contain bad debt, and improve asset quality. The banks have also ramped up efforts to reduce provisioning on NPAs. These efforts have been at the heart of the rise in bank profitabilities.

In fact, the overall improvement in asset quality has been a key driver of the rise in bank profitabilities. The banks have been able to reduce their provisioning levels on NPAs by a significant margin. This has helped increase profitability.

However, some of the banks have reported a rise in non-performing assets. This is a cause for concern as it suggests that the banks may be losing their ability to manage bad debt.

In conclusion, the rise in bank profitabilities is a positive development. It implies that the banks are making progress in managing bad debt and improving asset quality.

Nandan Raja

The demand for premium devices in India is on the rise, and the biggest beneficiaries are smartphone manufacturers. The trend is being driven by a variety of factors, including the growing preference for high-end phones, the rise of online shopping, and the increased spending power of consumers.

According to a recent report, the demand for premium phones in India has increased by 30% in the last year. This trend is expected to continue in the coming years, as more and more consumers are willing to spend on high-end devices.

The report also notes that the trend is not only limited to the top tier cities, but is also spreading to smaller towns and rural areas. This is due to the increasing popularity of smartphones and the growing availability of mobile networks.

In conclusion, the rise in premium phone demand is a positive development for the smartphone industry in India. It reflects the growing demand for high-end devices and the increased spending power of consumers.
