Panel seeks more vaccine data before emergency nod

Serum, Bharat Biotech to give safety, efficacy details; Pfizer wants time

THE EXPERT committee on vaccine approval on Wednesday asked Serum Institute of India and Bharat Biotech to provide more safety and efficacy data before the government’s emergency nod for the two companies’ Covid vaccines. The expert committee, however, will not be able to take a final decision on the vaccines, with which it processes taking some time.

Dr. Shashikala Deo, a member of the panel, said that the centre would take a decision on the vaccines only after looking at the data submitted by the companies. "We are looking at the safety and efficacy data and will talk to the companies and take a decision," she said.

Serum Institute of India’s SARS-CoV-2 vaccine (Covishield) is being produced by Indian Biologicals and Vaccines Ltd (IBVL) and Biological E (BE)’s vaccine (Covaxin) is being produced by Zydus and Bharat Biotech. The expert committee has to assess the data on different aspects of both the vaccines.

The expert panel also asked Serum Institute of India and Bharat Biotech to submit details on the vaccine production timelines, a detailed plan on distribution, and data on the vaccine storage conditions.

The emergency nod for the vaccines is needed because India is experiencing a surge in Covid-19 cases and is short of vaccines. The expert panel said it will take the decision on the vaccines after looking at the data submitted by the companies.

The government had announced the decision to distribute the vaccines free of cost to all beneficiaries over the age of 18 in the country. The government had announced the decision to distribute the vaccines free of cost to all beneficiaries over the age of 18 in the country.

U.S. ISSUES ALLERGY WARNING FOR PFIZER VACCINE

WASHINGTON: Pfizer and partner BioNTech have announced that while their Covid-19 vaccine is highly effective, it can also cause allergic reactions in a small number of people.

The announcement comes as the companies deliver millions of doses of the vaccine to health care workers and the elderly, who are at the highest risk of developing severe COVID-19.

The US’ Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) will continue to monitor the vaccine’s safety and efficacy in the future.

The companies said they had been monitoring reactions of volunteers to the vaccine in their clinical trials. The third participant, who got the vaccine, was hospitalized and spent two nights in an induced coma.

The US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approved the emergency use of the vaccine on December 11.

Centre reaches out, farmers say no

The election results can very well try their approach and make it clear that this is the last chance for us to become rich. There won't be a time when we can become rich at any other time.

In the northern part of the country, a group of farmers in Narora (F-2) are engaging in a peaceful protest against the recent abolition of the minimum support price (MSP) system by the government.

Tensions rose in the region when authorities announced plans to abolish the MSP system, which is in place for over six decades, amidst ongoing farmers' protests. The move has sparked widespread protests across the country, with farmers demanding the restoration of the MSP and highlighting the impact on their livelihoods.

The government has insisted that the abolition of the MSP system is necessary to reduce subsidies and ensure fair market prices for farmers. However, farmers argue that the system provides them with a guaranteed minimum income and helps them plan their crop production.

As the standoff continues, there is a growing sense of foreboding among the farmers and their supporters. They remain hopeful that the government will reconsider its decision and restore the MSP system, which they视作实现财务安全和稳定的关键保障。

Central leadership steps in, Biplab calls off ‘mandate’ event

LIZ MATHEW
NEWSWIRE DECEMBER 9

NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 9

A day after the BJP’s chief minister called off the party’s ‘mandate’ event programme in Tripura this week, sources said the central leadership is ready to intervene in the ongoing tussle between Biplab Deb and his party’s state unit.

Sources said the central leadership is preparing to take ‘appropriate steps’ to resolve the internal crisis within the state unit. A meeting has been planned on December 13 to decide whether the chief minister should continue in office in the face of internal challenges.

An official source told The Indian Express on Wednesday that the party’s national executive had been informed about the situation in the state unit. Sources added that the central leadership was preparing to hold a meeting with the chief minister and other leaders of the state unit to discuss the matter.

Sources added that the central leadership, although concerned about the internal issues, is also worried about the upcoming state assembly elections. Sources said the national executive believed that the central leadership should not intervene too soon.

“I don’t think it’s the right thing to do to take steps at this stage. But there’s no threat to Biplab’s leadership,” said the source.

Nabendu Bhattacharya, who had returned to the state unit earlier this week, said the central leadership had “raised red flags” about the situation in the state unit.

Amit Shah and Union Minister of Road, Mines and Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises, Biplab Deb met on December 5 to discuss the ongoing issues within the state unit.

Deb is reportedly not satisfied with the way the central leadership had been handling the internal issues. Deb has been raising issues about the party’s state unit for a long time.

However, sources added that the central leadership had been consulting with different politicians and leaders within the state unit to find a way to resolve the ongoing issues.

The central leadership is also reportedly considering the possibility of calling a meeting of the state unit to discuss the ongoing issues.

On December 5, Biplab called off the ‘mandate’ event programme in Tripura, saying it was not the right time for such an event.

“We are not planning to pursue the event programme any further. We have been discussing the situation in the state unit with the national leadership,” Deb said.

Amit Shah, who is also the home minister, has reportedly been discussing the ongoing issues with different leaders within the state unit.

Sources added that the central leadership was also considering the possibility of asking the national executive to take a decision about the ongoing issues.

By framing it as adversarial to democratic process, Niti Aayog CEO does deserve to democracy and reform

PART OF THE issue why Niti Aayog CEO Amitabh Kant sounds so off-key isn’t just the context, but also an event in Tuesday, about the “lowball” figure of around 600,000 babies “born dead” as an indicator for a “very low fertility rate” among women in India. If we were to accept the government’s definition of “low fertility”, the drop by 28% in our baby-making rate would make India a country on the brink of a demographic disaster.

By that measure, the government’s goal is to reduce the “infant mortality rate” to below 20%, which would mean India is a country on the brink of a demographic disaster. And that’s why the government’s goal is to reduce the “infant mortality rate” to below 20%, which would mean India is a country on the brink of a demographic disaster.

The “infant mortality rate” is a measure of the number of babies that die before their first birthday, divided by the total number of births in a given year. This is a global measure that is used to track the health of children in a country, and it is an indicator of how successful a country is in providing healthcare and preventing diseases.

In India, the infant mortality rate has been steadily declining over the past few decades, but it is still one of the highest in the world. The government has set a target of reducing the infant mortality rate to 20% by 2025, and it is working hard to achieve this goal by improving access to healthcare and other related services.

However, some experts argue that the government’s target is not ambitious enough, and that more needs to be done to tackle the problem of infant mortality. They argue that the government should focus on improving the quality of healthcare services, especially in rural areas, and on reducing the number of preventable deaths, such as those caused by infections and malnutrition.

Despite these challenges, the government is making progress in improving the health of children in India. In recent years, the government has increased its spending on healthcare, and it has introduced new initiatives to improve the quality of healthcare services. This is a positive development, and it is hoped that the government will continue to make progress in this area.

In conclusion, the infant mortality rate is a critical indicator of a country’s health, and it is important for the government to continue to work towards reducing this rate. By focusing on improving the quality of healthcare services and reducing the number of preventable deaths, the government can make a significant impact in improving the health of children in India.

IMMORAL U-TURN

IN THE editorial, ‘Kerala’s Left lot in a hole’ (November 30), you say that the Kerala Assembly’s order refusing to compel any state government to accept the earlier verdict of the Jammu and Kashmir High Court is illegal. The court had allowed the Assembly to pass an order in the matter of reserve list. This is a travesty of justice as the Assembly has the power to pass such an order under the Constitution.

But the court’s reasoning is flawed. The court has not taken into account the fact that the Assembly’s power is not absolute. It can be overridden by the President, who can give a direction to the Assembly to pass an order in a particular case. The court’s decision is therefore unconstitutional.

In the meantime, the government of Kerala has enacted a new law to provide reservation for lower caste persons. This law is constitutional and should be upheld by the court. The court’s decision is therefore contrary to the law.

AILING NATION

YOU REFER to the article ‘New health protocol for coronavirus death认定’ (DEAS

November 29) in which you mention that the new health protocol for coronavirus death认定 is based on the general condition of patients, their age, and the presence of comorbidities. You say that patients with multiple comorbidities are more likely to die from coronavirus. This is true. But the protocol does not mention the role of vaccination. In India, a large number of people are vaccinated against coronavirus but still succumb to the disease. This shows that the protocol is not effective in preventing death认定 from coronavirus.

INDIA’S PARLIAMENT is a magnificent creature of the people, with the national legislature and presiding officers as the constituent powers of the Union. It houses the representatives of the people, and the presiding officers are elected one by one, and a majority of the elected members of the Parliament must be members of the Union. Such a body has the authority and jurisdiction to make laws for the whole of India, and to regulate the executive and judicial powers of the Union and the States.

The 175th year of India’s independence, 2023, will be an annum in the country’s democratic governance. To mark this, India will host the United Nations’ General Assembly meeting in New Delhi in October 2023. This event will mark the first time that India will host the General Assembly of the United Nations, and it will be a significant milestone in India’s diplomatic and political history. The event will also provide an opportunity for India to showcase its commitment to international cooperation and the promotion of peace and security.

In this context, it is important that all segments of the society work together to ensure that the event is successful. The government, the private sector, and the media should collaborate to provide a platform for dialogue and understanding. The event will offer an opportunity for India to engage with other countries and to promote its vision for a more prosperous and inclusive world.

END OF THE ROAD FOR THE IKEA CATALOGUE, PICTURE BOOK OF GOOD-HOME IDEAS

IKEA's catalogue, which is one of the most famous catalogues in the world, has been a symbol of good ideas and affordability for over 50 years. However, after 70 years, IKEA has decided to phase out its printed catalogue and transition to a digital platform. This move is part of a broader trend towards digital transformation in the retail industry, as consumers become increasingly reliant on online shopping and digital experiences.

IKEA's CEO, Ingvar Kamprad, said in a statement, "We have always been driven by the idea of giving everyone the possibility to create their own home. That idea has driven us to constantly evolve and innovate. And today, we believe that the digital future is the future of IKEA."

The decision marks the end of an era for IKEA, which has been printing its iconic catalogue since 1951. The catalogue has been a mainstay of IKEA's identity and has been a source of inspiration for millions of people around the world. However, with the rise of online shopping and digital media, the need for a printed catalogue has diminished.

The transition to a digital platform will allow IKEA to reach a wider audience and provide more personalized and interactive experiences. The company is planning to launch a new digital platform that will offer customers a more seamless shopping experience, with easier navigation and better product search functionality.

IKEA has also announced that it will continue to produce a limited edition of the traditional brown catalogue, which has become a collector's item for many customers. The limited edition catalogue will be released in 2022 and will feature new furniture designs and limited edition items.

The move towards digital platforms is becoming increasingly common in the retail industry, as companies look to adapt to the changing needs of consumers. However, the transition is not without challenges, as companies need to invest in new technologies and train their employees to work in a digital environment.

UK regulators investigate possible allergic reactions to Pfizer’s coronavirus vaccine

People vaccinated with Pfizer’s Covid-19 vaccine are being monitored for signs of allergic reactions, as the drugmaker conducts an experiment to assess the safety of its latest shot.

A senior Pfizer executive has confirmed that the company is investigating a possible allergic reaction in one person who received the vaccine in the United Kingdom. The incident is being investigated as part of Pfizer’s standard procedure for monitoring side effects after each dose of its vaccine is administered.

The Pfizer vaccine was shown to be 95% effective in preventing Covid-19 in clinical trials and has been widely hailed as a significant step in the global fight against the pandemic.

However, as with any new vaccine, there is always a possibility of rare and unusual side effects. Pfizer has said that it is monitoring all reported adverse events closely and will continue to work closely with health agencies around the world to ensure the safety and efficacy of its vaccine.

The company has previously said that it is committed to transparency and will report any safety data in a timely and open manner. Pfizer has also said that it is working closely with health authorities to ensure that those who are vaccinated are monitored for any unexpected side effects.

In a statement, Pfizer said: “We are monitoring all reported adverse events in detail and will continue to work closely with health authorities to ensure the safety and efficacy of our vaccine.”

The European Medicines Agency (EMA) has also expressed its commitment to monitoring the safety of the Pfizer vaccine and has said that it will continue to review all available data to ensure the vaccine’s safety.

Evaluating the safety of vaccines is a standard part of the regulatory process and is an important step in ensuring that the benefits of vaccination outweigh any potential risks. The EMA has said that it is monitoring the Pfizer vaccine closely and will continue to monitor reports of any adverse events.

The World Health Organization (WHO) has also said that it is monitoring the safety of the Pfizer vaccine and has urged countries to report any adverse events to the WHO’s global vaccine safety monitoring system.

In the UK, the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) has said that it is monitoring the safety of the Pfizer vaccine closely and has asked healthcare professionals to report any concerns to the National Adverse Event Reporting Scheme (NAERS).

The JCVI has said that it is important to monitor the safety of vaccines as part of the ongoing process of ensuring their safety and efficacy. The JCVI has also said that it is committed to transparency and will continue to update the public on the safety of the Pfizer vaccine as new information becomes available.

Pak Opp alliance says lawmakers will quit en masse for early polls

The political opposition alliance in Pakistan said on Tuesday that it will resign in masse by the end of December 31 to push for early elections.

The Pakistan Democratic Movement (PDM), which was formed after the formation of a new political alliance to challenge Prime Minister Imran Khan's government, said in a statement on Tuesday that it will resign on December 31 if the government does not dissolve the National Assembly to set the stage for early elections.

This is the second time that the PDM has threatened to resign, as it had earlier said in December 2020 that it would resign on June 15 of this year to force early elections.

PLAYERS HAVE taken a knee, unfurled flags and demanded tougher action to stop a match. But in what has become a routine fixture, UEFA prosecute discriminatory incidents like Thursday night’s alleged abuse at the Parc des Princes.

The incident showed the need for much better training of match officials. Discrimination was at the root of the racism.

While games in nations such as France are being played without fans because of the COVID-19 pandemic, typically the racism has come from the stands.

Joint walkout potential turning point in fight against racism

Saturday, December 9, 2020

In the UEFA Champions League game between Paris Saint-Germain and Istanbul Basaksehir on Tuesday, the fourth official was allegedly to have described the Istanbul Basaksehir team members as ‘Turkish racists’ and ‘black assistants’ before the game started.

The fourth official, Romanian Sebastian Coltescu, made a discriminatory racist remark that caught the ear of the players. “The Black one over there. Go and check who he is. The Black one over there, it’s not possible to act like that,” said Coltescu, according to a Reuters report.

Coltescu was referring to Cameroonian Pierre Webo, an assistant coach for the Turkish team who has been vehemently protesting against a racist decision.

What was the players’ response?

Basaksehir striker Demba Ba was the most vocal, setting off ships and calling the referee a “race-hater.”

Following these incidents, players from both teams decided to abandon the match and walk off the pitch.

What was Uefa’s response?

Uefa said on Twitter: “Uefa aware of an incident during tonight’s Champions League match between Paris Saint-Germain and Istanbul Basaksehir. The Uefa anti-racism and discrimination officer is on site, and the incident is under thorough investigation.”

Uefa decided that the match, which was stopped in the 65th minute, would be completed at the next day.
