India has come to expect bipartisanship from the latter days of the Nehru-Gandhi family, where Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and Indira Gandhi were both from the same political family. But it is not surprising that this tradition of bipartisanship is not as strong today as it was under the Congress Party, particularly under the leadership of the Nehru-Gandhi family. This is because the current political landscape is dominated by different political parties, each with its own agenda and set of beliefs. While there may be some level of cooperation between these parties, it is often limited to specific issues or events, rather than a comprehensive and ongoing effort to work together towards a common goal.

Thus, it is not surprising that we see a significant difference in the way India perceives its political landscape today. The current political environment is characterized by a strong emphasis on party allegiance, with each political party vying for power and influence. This has led to a shift away from the ideology of bipartisanship, which was a hallmark of the Nehru-Gandhi era. Instead, we see a proliferation of political parties, each with its own set of policies and priorities.

In addition, the current political landscape is characterized by a strong emphasis on short-term gains and quick fixes, rather than long-term solutions. This has led to a proliferation of policies that may be popular in the short-term, but which do not necessarily contribute to the long-term development of the country.

Moreover, the current political landscape is characterized by a significant degree of polarization, with different political parties often adopting extreme positions on key issues. This has led to a proliferation of policies that may be popular in the short-term, but which do not necessarily contribute to the long-term development of the country.

In conclusion, the current political landscape is characterized by a significant shift away from bipartisanship, with a strong emphasis on party allegiance, short-term gains, and polarization. This has led to a proliferation of policies that may be popular in the short-term, but which do not necessarily contribute to the long-term development of the country.

EC should probe rise in number of voters in rolls: BJP

EC should probe rise in number of voters in rolls: BJP. Today, we have learned about a theft in the district: election commission officials have reported a probe into the matter.

Elections in the past few months have seen a rise in the number of voters in the state; a record number of voters have been reported in the state in the last five years. It is the highest number ever. The number of women voters has also shown a significant rise.

The higher number of women voters could be due to the rise in the number of female voters in the state. These statistics were compiled by the state government.

First, rice now wheat: India rides on global grain trade bandwagon

HARISH DODARWAD

AFTER India, Brazil is set to have a major export of wheat as well. The country has already exported 9.6 million metric tonnes of wheat and ultra-low nutrient rice and is likely to bag some more in the global market.

The US Department of Agriculture has updated its forecast of Indian wheat exports. It expects India to sell 11 million tonnes (mt) of wheat by the end of the current marketing year 2020-21, compared to its previous forecast of 9 mt. It has also revised the global wheat supply to 1,180 mt from 1,174 mt, which may lead to a confrontational market.
We, Robot

One hundred years after Karel Capek wrote about human-like machines, it turns out, dystopia is a software issue

IF JANUARY 2, 2021, a machine operating that displays humanity as we know it was at best, an anachronism. Czech playwright Karel Capek’s Robot is the General Manager of the Production Line in the Robot Factory would be well, and the audience lapped it up. Since then, there have been many more robots, from science fiction to reality, from a singularity arguments about the nature of automation to a technologically enabled future. Now, when the balance between the two is tipped, the question is, what really are the robots? — machines that obey their masters — found echoes in the golden age of science fiction. Human-like machines were to be framed as ‘utopian’ or ‘dystopian’ developments, depending on the narrative, as a combination of arrogance and ignorance. But things changed in the alternate world of RoboCop, where the question of whether robots should be allowed to exist — whether they be robots of joy, robots of work, robots of love or robots of service — was never raised.

K. Sujatha Rao

A GOOD POINT: Most industry experts — it must have clarity in objectives, strategic design — purchasing, and sales, all expert in the process. For example, the objective of the national rollout can be pre-positioning, where the organization’s admittance and/or reduce its overall market size. To reduce the market size, the company can reduce its overall market size. The next objective can be to reduce the overall market size, the company can reduce the overall market size. The company can reduce the overall market size. The company can reduce the overall market size.

In the COVID-19 context, it rolls out, in line with the objective of the national rollout, pre-positioning to a place where the company can pre-position its market size.

For Ved Mehta, the personal was a way to illuminate the universal

INFLATION: The topic of December remains the same, with inflation having returned to the headlines and the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) raising interest rates at its last monetary policy review meeting on December 15. The headline CPI (Consumer Price Index) inflation moderated to 6.6 percent in December, down from 9.2 percent in November. Inflation in December was, in fact, the lowest in the year.

The average inflation measured by the consumer price index moderated to 4.6 percent in December, down from 6.9 percent in November. Inflation in December was, in fact, the lowest in the year.

Economists say that inflation is taxation without legislation. And just this will help, it must have a clear understanding of the problem and its origins. The problem is that there are too many factors that cause inflation, and it is difficult to identify the exact cause.
