KIRISH KAUSHIK & PATRIK ESKELIN

NEW DELHI, JANUARY 20

OTT/UG孚ller, Tenor became the first mini-series to top the digital charts with two snipped scenes in the Tandav trailer. The show, a five-part series on Amazon Prime, is set in the fictitious state of Sivaganga, which is based on the politics of West Bengal.

The first scene shows a group of politicians plotting behind closed doors. The second scene shows a group of farmers protesting on the outskirts of the city, with a police officer getting involved. The scenes were removed from the first trailer to avoid any controversy.

The trailers for the show have received mixed reviews from fans and critics alike. Some fans praised the show for its realistic portrayal of Indian politics, while others criticized it for being too melodramatic.

The court of Justice Anil Kumar Bhandari rejected Gupta's bail application on the ground that there was no likelihood of an acquittal in the case. Gupta, who has been in custody since the TRP scam came to light in November, has been charged under the Official Secrets Act and is accused of leaking confidential information to journalist Arnab Goswami.

Commonsense can also be helpful in formulating the rules. As the saying goes, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." In this case, the prevention is ensuring that the data is collected with consent, kept confidential, and only used for purposes that were clearly outlined at the time of collection. It is the responsibility of the companies to ensure that they are not taking shortcuts or exploiting vulnerabilities in the system.

Moreover, the companies need to be held accountable for their actions. This can be achieved through a combination of enforcement actions and public shaming. Public shaming is a powerful tool that can deter other companies from committing similar offenses. It is important that the companies are not just fined, but also publicly pilloried, so that others can learn from their mistakes.

In conclusion, while the CCIT's draft laws are a step in the right direction, there is still much work to be done. The government needs to continue to work with the companies to ensure that they are taking the necessary steps to protect the privacy of their users. At the same time, the companies need to be held accountable for their actions, and the public needs to be educated on the importance of data privacy. Only then can we ensure that the digital world is a safe and secure place for all.

THE CYBER TAX CONUNDRUM

The Cyber Service Tax (DST) could offer an interim solution

The core problem that the international tax reform is facing is the taxation of digital services and digital assets, which are often not subject to any tax or subject to a much lower tax rate. This has led to a race between countries to attract these digital services and assets, which has resulted in a fragmented tax system.

The DST, which stands for Digital Service Tax, is a tax imposed by governments on digital companies for the use of their digital services on the territory of the country. The DST is imposed on the revenue generated from the use of digital services in a country, and is intended to tax non-resident companies that generate digital services within the country.

While the DST is not a perfect solution, it is a step in the right direction. It is a form of taxation that is designed to ensure that digital services and assets are subject to taxation, which is essential for a fair and equitable tax system.

The DST is also a form of taxation that is designed to be more equitable than other forms of taxation, such as the value-added tax (VAT) and the goods and services tax (GST). The DST is designed to be a more effective form of taxation for digital services and assets, which are not subject to these forms of taxation.

In conclusion, the DST is a form of taxation that is designed to ensure that digital services and assets are subject to taxation, which is essential for a fair and equitable tax system. The DST is also a form of taxation that is designed to be more effective for digital services and assets, which are not subject to other forms of taxation. The DST is therefore a step in the right direction, and should be supported by all governments.
