Police probe possibility of negligence or foul play

SUDANSHU KULKARNI

Pune officials said on Thursday that a probe into the fire in Serum Institute of India (SII)’s Manjri plant on November 28, which resulted in the death of five workers, is on. Police have launched an official probe, while the government has already determined the case will be registered as an accident.

There is a broader sense that the incident led to a number of persons being injured and that a number of persons were injured. A police report on the matter will be continued with their upward trend.

A firm's board members are also required to register the case under Section 138 of the Indian Penal Code (IPC), which deals with the issue of non-payment of dues. The case was also registered under the Secunderabad police station.

While the government can't do anything about the situation, it is necessary to have a mechanism to handle such situations. The government should not be involved in any way, as it is not in its jurisdiction to handle such cases.

Three BJP workers held for ‘golhi maro’ slogan in Hooghly

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE

KOLKATA, JANUARY 21

Three BJP workers—two from its Youth wing and one a local leader—were booked on Thursday for shouting the controversial hokey slogan, "golhi maro..." while cheering for party candidates during a meeting here.

Pirzada Abbas Siddiqui, state president of the Indian Secular Front, on Thursday announced that his party was joining hands with Asaduddin Owaisi’s AIMIM to contest the upcoming elections in the state.

"The issue is not about the BJP or Congress, it is about the TMC," said state BJP president Dilip Ghosh.

"We had come to have a com- mercial of our party's candidates through a local channel. Instead of showing it, they have shown something which hurts community sentiments," he said.

Siddiqui, who was addressing a meeting here, said: "If there are some who have wrong ideas, it doesn't matter. We want to spread the message of peace and harmony."
Kolkata: The full bench of the Election Commission (EC) on Thursday denied a plea to remove the disqualification of a West Bengal BJP leader, saying the party cannot be a scapegoat for the Sangh Parivar. Vinay Khandelwal, the former state unit president of the BJP, had moved the EC seeking relief from his disqualification under the Representation of the People Act, 1951, on the ground that he had been an elected representative of the state Assembly from 2016 to 2021.

The full bench, consisting of Chief Election Commissioner Sunil Arora and other members, rejected the plea after noting that the BJP had initiated an internal disciplinary action against him for the alleged violation of the law.

Khandelwal, who has been a member of the state assembly since 2016, had been disqualified by the EC in November last year under the Representation of the People Act for not disclosing his nomination in the 2021 Assembly elections.

The commission had found that Khandelwal had not revealed his nomination in the election affidavit he submitted to the poll body. The EC had upheld the disqualification of three other BJP MLAs and state unit president Dilip Ghosh.

The order was based on an inquiry conducted by the state executive committee of the BJP, which had found that Khandelwal had not revealed his nomination in the affidavit submitted to the EC.

However, the EC had rejected the plea of the BJP leader, saying that the party could not escape liability for the violation of the law.

The commission had earlier ruled that the BJP and its state unit must be held responsible for the violation of the law by its leaders and members, and that the party could not be a scapegoat for the violation.

The full bench had noted that the BJP had initiated an internal disciplinary action against Khandelwal for the alleged violation of the law, and that the party could not escape liability for the violation.

The bench had also noted that the BJP had initiated an internal disciplinary action against its state unit president Dilip Ghosh, who had also been disqualified by the EC.

LAWNS ON PAUSE

This is exactly what the Opposition had asked for—and the Government rejected. This should help farmers come to the table

The NABARD-MoF’s government’s offer to sell the 10-year-old agricultural laws, which have caused so much distress to the farming community, has drawn a mixed response from the Opposition. While some have welcomed the move, others have expressed reservations, saying that the proposals do not address the core issues that farmers have been protesting against for months.

The agricultural laws are set to come into effect from October 1, and the farmers’ unions have already announced that they will continue their protests across the country. The government has also announced that it will provide financial assistance to farmers who are affected by the new laws.

The proposed move by the farmers’ unions and the government is likely to be a key issue in the upcoming elections, with both sides finding it difficult to reach a consensus.

Biden’s burden

The challenge is to find a way to persuade farmers to come to the table and engage in meaningful dialogue with the government. The government needs to show that it is sincere in its commitment to the farmers’ demands and is willing to make concessions to address their concerns.

The farmer community is deeply disappointed with the government’s approach, and it has been clear that the government’s proposals have not done enough to address the farmers’ concerns. The farmers have been calling for the complete repeal of the three laws, which they say have been causing them great hardship.

The government’s proposals have been met with skepticism by the farmers, who have pointed out that the proposals do not address the core issues that they have been protesting against.

ANUKMA

The National Education Policy (NEP) (2020), the fourth new independence, was introduced in the Lok Sabha on February 18, but the government is yet to consult with the concerned stakeholders. The NEP was introduced to improve the quality of education and to make it more inclusive and equitable.

There are many provisions in the policy for improving the quality of higher education. For the first time, internationalisation of universities will be encouraged to attract more foreign students. The policy also focuses on the need to improve the technical education and skills of the youth.

KARNATAKA VIOLENCE

There were reports of violence in the state of Karnataka, particularly in the coastal districts of Udupi and Dakshina Kannada. According to the police, the violence was triggered by a dispute between two groups over a land dispute.

The violence was reported to have started on January 12, with clashes between two groups over a land dispute in the town of Moodbidri in Udupi district.

The police were deployed to maintain law and order, and they succeeded in putting down the violence. However, the situation remained tense in the area, with tension continuing to simmer in the days that followed.

The violence in Karnataka has raised concerns about the state of governance in the state, as well as the role of the police in maintaining law and order.

HOOCHOY TREATMENT

The issue of dacoit treatment in Jamaica has gained prominence in recent years. The government has been accused of failing to adequately address the problem of dacoits and to provide adequate protection for the victims.

The issue was brought to the fore by the killing of a young man in the parishes of St. Mary and St. Thomas. The government has been criticized for its response to the incident, and there have been calls for greater action to be taken to address the problem.

— DAWN, PAKISTAN

The Case for Rahane

Rahane has a natural flair for the game. No doubt, though, he often sounds a potential top-rank batsman. His batting is the one area where he is clearly superior to Kohli, who is a good middle-order batsman but more than a bit of a periphery on the downfield. Rahane’s bowling, on the other hand, is his strong point, and his role as a bowling all-rounder should be utilised to the full. His fielding is not bad, either, and he is generally considered to be a very good player of the game.

Need to control prices of certain commodities is historically contingent

Bibek Debroy

THREE TIMES President and economist Bibek Debroy recently wrote a column on the subject of the government’s role in agriculture. He argued that the government’s role should be limited to ensuring the necessary conditions for a competitive market to function efficiently. Debroy cited the example of the pre-1990s period, when the government controlled the prices of essential commodities such as foodgrains, petroleum products, and electric energy. He argued that these controls were necessary because they helped to ensure that prices remained low and accessible to all.

A man's daughter stumbled upon a document from Foreign Express Network that seemed to discuss the current state of the world and some pressing issues. The document was written in a formal tone, possibly for a newsletter or an official report. While reading through the document, the man couldn't help but notice the small print at the bottom, which mentioned something aboutrice and the current global market conditions. He wondered if there was any relevance to this in the context of the main content of the document. He decided to continue reading to find out more.
Sensex @50,000, what next for investors

The non-stop bull rally on the stock markets has taken the benchmark over the milestone of 50,000. Several questions loom over the market horizon: Is the rally for real? Why is it happening? Will the bull run continue?

Sandeep Singh & George Mathew

How has the Sensex moved and changed over the years?

Launched on January 2, 1980 (base: 100, 1978-79 = 100), India’s benchmark stock market index is the first of its kind in Asia. It consists of 30 stocks and was first published on January 2, 1980. Since its inception, the index has seen several changes and updates, reflecting the ever-evolving market landscape.

Inflation, growth, and the economy

The Sensex is an excellent tool to gauge the pulse of the economy. During periods of inflation, the index tends to rise, reflecting the high demand for stocks. Conversely, in times of economic slowdown, the Sensex may fall, indicating a decrease in investor confidence.

The rally broad-based, or limited to only a few stocks?

In early March and February 2023, the Sensex rose, driven by a rally in select sectors like financials, technology, and real estate. This broad-based rally is often seen as a positive sign, as it suggests that the market is healthy and not dependent on just a few sectors.

Should you book any profits now?

Analysts say that the rise in the Sensex is driven by improving fundamentals and the belief that the worst of the pandemic is over. However, profit-booking must be targeted growth, and for investors who need liquidity, it might be a good idea to book some profits now. As of now, liquidity is pushing up the market. While the market may consolidate, the key is to remain cautious and monitor the market movements closely.

What are the drivers behind the Sensex’s rise?

The continuous rally that followed the 2008 financial crisis was driven by government policies, corporate earnings growth, and the perceived stability of financial markets. Today, the Sensex’s rise can be attributed to a combination of factors, including investor sentiment, economic growth, and market fundamentals.

The country’s first equity index

The National Stock Exchange of India (NSE) launched the Sensex on January 2, 1980, as a broad-based index designed to provide a benchmark for the equity market. The index was developed to meet the needs of investors who were looking for a representative measure of the overall market performance.

The index soon became a key indicator of the Indian economy and a reference point for investors. Over the years, the Sensex has evolved, incorporating changes in the market landscape, and has become a crucial tool for investors to track the performance of the Indian stock market.

CHARABANDY

On the 11th day of April, 2021, people sang, “Happy birthday.” I had the grandest of all birthdays. I woke up to the news that my childhood friend, Ajay Thakur, had returned from his accident. I remember the day vividly. It was a day when the entire city was in trouble. The lockdown had just started, and we were all on the lookout for a way out of the mess.

WHAT DID YOU MISS MOST IN YOUR VACATION?

For me, it was all about music and movies. I was not so into sports during that time. I was busy with my music and playing cricket.

WHAT DID YOU SPEAK TO ANYONE DURING THIS BREAK BETWEEN TWO GAMES?

I spoke to my family. They were happy to see me back home. They were happy to see me on the field. They were happy to see me doing well. I was happy to see them doing well.

WHAT HAVE YOU LEARNED FROM THIS VACATION?

I have learned a lot from this break. I have learned to be patient. I have learned to be consistent. I have learned to be honest.
