Era’s Lucknow Medical College & Hospital

Lowest COVID mortality, highest recovery

We are a leading L-3 facility with the maximum number of patients in the state of Uttar Pradesh. Era’s effective treatment has resulted in a recovery rate of more than 96%; and, a mortality rate of 3.7%, which for an L-3 facility is the lowest in the state and perhaps in the country. We are thankful to SKOCH for recognising our feat.

In non-critical wards, patients’ vitals are measured through Bluetooth-enabled Pulse-Oximeters and BP Machines. These machines automatically transmit the data to the CPMS for control room monitoring.

The VR-SECURE BOOTH, an air-tight aluminium and glass cabin prevents the influx of infected air into the chamber and its double-layer safety gloves ensured a high standard of infection control. Digidoctor, a telemedicine app was developed and made available for OFD patients who could contact doctors for treatment and follow up without visiting the hospital.

Outcomes

In the absence of the usual in-person OFD, Era also began e-Consultations through Digidoctor. More than 7,500 telemedicine consultations have been done through this app free of cost.

Era Lucknow Medical College & Hospital, along with King George’s Medical University (KGMU) and Dr.Ram Manohar Lohia Institute of Medical Sciences (RMLIMS) is a part of a Phase III Clinical Trials of Antiviral Drug Umifenovir conducted by Central Drug Research Institute (CDRI), Lucknow.

Era has treated and discharged more than 3,000 cases and counting. It is a L-3 facility with the maximum number of patients in Uttar Pradesh. Some of these patients were extremely critical and high-risk cases on ventilator that were successfully extubated.

Constituent Assembly. Mamata Banerjee. We want the dhum to him and Chief Minister Basu and submitted a memorandum. It was unanimously backed by the party. Under Chief Minister's administration's "Duare Sarkar" ahuge success. The celebrated economist demarcated that actually make very little real progress in the past six years, he alleged that efforts were being made to destroy the country's political fabric. “We don’t consider the country’s minorities, especially local communities, can go any farther. We are making a push to make the country a ‘Hindu Rashtra’.”

Looking for mud to attack the opposition, the government is trying to create a hindrance for the opposition. It is trying to create a hindrance where we can’t even speak up. One person has been murdered for speaking up. It is the same old story. We are being forced to participate in the Bundelkhand festival."

When asked for his view on the recent Left party-governmenties being under pressure, Sen said: “When a government makes a law, it should be made in the name of the people, but it is made by the government. Even the people who support the government are against the law. The government is acting against the wishes of the people."

“Struggles will continue till the last man is left in the struggle. It is not happening by the grace of any government. It is happening by the people. It is happening by the people who are involved in the struggle. It is happening by the people who are fighting for their rights,” the economist added.

Sen’s comments come in the backdrop of recent protests calling for the release of detained farmers, who have been arrested for participating in the farmers’ movement against the three agricultural laws.

The river Ganges is not only a religious symbol for millions of people, it's also the lifeline of countless lives and economies. The river is central to the cultural and economic fabric of India, and its pollution has become a pressing issue. The Government of India has taken several steps to address the issue of pollution in the Ganges River. One of the key initiatives has been the Namami Gange programme, which focuses on cleaning and rejuvenating the river. The programme aims to improve the water quality of the Ganges by addressing point and non-point sources of pollution, including agricultural runoff, sewage, and industrial waste.

In Uttarakhand, a state located along the banks of the Ganges River, several interventions have been carried out under the Namami Gange programme to improve the river's health. These include the construction of sewage treatment plants (STPs) to manage sewage load, and the rehabilitation of existing STPs to ensure they meet the required standards. The state has also taken steps to promote organic farming along the riverbanks, which helps in reducing the use of chemical fertilizers and pesticides.

In Haridwar-Rishikesh, the river has been cleaned every day due to the efforts of Habitat India, which is working towards making the river Ganges clean and accessible to all. Similarly, the Uttar Pradesh government has also taken initiatives to improve the river's quality, such as the construction of sewage treatment plants and the promotion of organic farming. These efforts are crucial in ensuring that the Ganges remains a vital source of life and culture for generations to come.

Farmer Protests: Track 2.0

The Centre has power to enact laws promoting barrier-free trade (which is also intra-state) and also involves restrictions. But that can only be done after the farmers have been heard. While the Essential Commodities (Amendment) Act exemplifying traders and processors from stocking limits the text, the same cannot be said of the other two Central laws. Regulations of farmland by farmers—which remain in mandates or via contract cultivation arrangements—enshrine the responsibility of the state, met the Centre.

The Indo-Pacific region

Amid changing post-pandemic realities, India needs to be swift in identifying partners it can trust and who will further its interests

JAYANT SINHAH and
SAMIR NARAN

The COVID-19 vaccines are coming. And along with this sunny comes a new age of pragmatism. The energies “now” with different pricing points and affordability. Nations have seized the initiative to secure vaccines from countries and companies they trust, often by buying directly. The scramble for supplies is ongoing and will keep chronicling into the future. Even a year ago, the global community might have asked, “How has the world managed to come together to fight the pandemic?” But now, we see nations around the world working in concert to secure vaccines, which shows that trust is one of the most important tools in our fight against the pandemic.

India’s importance in this context is clear. It is a major contributor to the global economy, with a population of over 1.3 billion people. It has a long history of political and economic cooperation with the United States, which is a key partner in the Indo-Pacific region.

India’s role in the Indo-Pacific is significant and evolving. It is a major player in the region’s economic growth and development, and it plays a role in regional security and stability. India is also a major contributor to the global economy, with a large and growing middle class that is eager to consume and invest.

The Indo-Pacific region is one of the most dynamic and complex parts of the world. It is home to some of the world’s most populous and economically important countries, including China, Japan, India, and Southeast Asian nations. It is also the site of many important international organizations, including the United Nations, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), and the World Trade Organization (WTO).

India’s role in the Indo-Pacific is likely to continue to expand in the coming years. As the regional economy grows and becomes more integrated, India will be in a position to play a greater role in regional affairs and to benefit from the region’s economic success.

India’s role in the Indo-Pacific will be shaped by a number of factors, including its domestic political and economic developments, its relationships with other countries in the region, and its interactions with international organizations. India is likely to continue to be a major player in the region, and its role will continue to evolve and change as the region itself evolves and changes.

Relief for onion farmers as Centre lifts ban on export

India

The Centre has lifted the export ban on onions, which was imposed last month due to the skyrocketing prices in the domestic market. The move is likely to ease the shortage of the vegetable in the country.

The decision was taken after a meeting of the Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs (CCEA) on Monday. The meeting was chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi.

The Centre had imposed the ban in August to control the onion prices, which had reached record levels. The move was aimed at ensuring that the vegetable is available to the people at a reasonable price.

The Centre had also announced that it would be providing assistance to farmers in the form of direct benefit transfer (DBT) to help them bear the cost of producing the vegetable.

In addition, the Centre had announced that it would be setting up an onion board to monitor the market and ensure that the prices are kept under check.

India’s first indigenously created vaccine against pneumococcal disease

The vaccine, Pneumosil, will be available shortly.

The TAILWINDS
The vaccine, Pneumosil, was developed through a collaborative effort between the Serum Institute of India, which has a long history of producing affordable vaccines in the country, and PATH, a global health organization that has been working to improve pneumococcal vaccine coverage worldwide. Based on the trials, experts are confident that the vaccine will be effective in preventing pneumococcal disease.

The RED FLAGS
The demand for a pneumococcal vaccine is driven by the need to protect vulnerable populations, such as infants and young children, who are at a higher risk of developing severe pneumonia. However, the production of vaccines is expensive, and many countries struggle to afford them. This is a major challenge for the global health community, as pneumonia is a leading cause of death in children under five years of age worldwide.

The NEW IN NEW YEAR
In the new year, healthcare companies and governments will be focused on ensuring that the vaccine is accessible to those who need it most. This will require a coordinated effort to ensure that the vaccine is produced in adequate quantities and distributed to remote and rural areas.
