Central Vista gets Supreme Court’s all-clear: 2-1 verdict says no infirmity

Justice Khanna dissent: Must make intelligible information public

SOT AHANAN
NEW DELHI, JANUARY 5

HOLDING THAT public participation in a proposed law, project or formula is a decision-making process, Justice Sanjiv Khanna, in a dissenting judgment in the Central Vista project case, Tuesday said that the right to make a choice and suggestions will also be included in the right to have intelligible and adequate information regarding the project.

Hence these commentaries on information made available to the public while testing objections or suggestions to the proposed development of Central Vista, Parliament Building and Connaught Central Terminal.

“Before preparation of any project and in subsequent development in the development area, the government must make a decision and suggestions from the public are also an integral part of such a decision. The Authority has also gone to the extent of urging the government to provide better health and sanitation facilities in the master plan. While two judgements on the Bench upheld the government’s exercise of the power to develop the Central Vista, Justice Sanjiv Khanna in his dissenting opinion said…”

While the earlier Sanjay Nirupam-led government in Maharashtra had exempted the confection from paying entertainment duty in 1986, the Maharashtra government was not able to decide whether to extend it.

Nirupam had to go with the recommendation of then Chief Minister Vilasrao Deshmukh, which was approved by the Cabinet. The state legislative council in its 22nd session passed an amendment to the Excise Act, 1984, which exempted the industry from paying entertainment duty. The state government has decided to involve all stakeholders, the water sector, the forest department, the pollution board, etc.

NEW DELHI, JANUARY 5

Prime Minister Boris Johnson on Tuesday called off his planned visit to India, as the UK expressed regret that he would not be able to travel to the Republic on Tuesday.

Johnson looked at four areas: India’s biggest adult vaccination exercise and hoped that the UK would overcome Covid challenges successfully.

Both leaders reaffirmed their commitment to working constructively and desiring deepening bilateral relations in the coming years.

India has to make for a ‘sustainable’ visit for the Republic Day celebrations.

“[A]pproved” by the Delhi Development Authority as per the DCR Act, 1971, and also the draft Master Plan for Delhi, 2021, approved by the Heritage Conservation Committee (HCC) under the Master Plan (Delhi) Act, 1973, in December 2019. Chief Guest to the event was Chief Justice of India (CJI) NV Ramana.

The project aims to develop 46.8 acres of land in Lutyen’s Delhi and removes the need for any supplementation from the Budget for the project works.

Central Vista

On December 14, Chief Justice of India (CJI) NV Ramana inaugurated the Central Vista project in Lutyen’s Delhi, which will see the relocation of several government offices from the Secretariat Building to the vicinity of the Supreme Court. The project, which is estimated to cost ₹2,000 crore, is aimed at reducing congestion in the area and improving connectivity.

Central Vista

The Central Vista project, which was approved in 2019, will see the construction of a new government complex in Lutyen’s Delhi. The complex will be located near the Supreme Court and will accommodate several government offices that are currently housed in the Secretariat Building.

Central Vista

The Central Vista project is expected to be completed by 2022. The project is aimed at reducing congestion in the area and improving connectivity. The Supreme Court has already moved to a new building in the vicinity, and the relocation of other government offices is expected to take place in the coming months.

NIA charges 20, Pinarayi’s ex-principal secretary not named

The National Investigation Agency (NIA) on Tuesday charged 20 people in connection with the gold smuggling case at the Kerala-Tamil Nadu border, but did not name Kerala Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan’s principal secretary Aswathanandhan Bhaskar, who was named in the chargesheet.

In the news:
- The NIA investigation was launched on January 1 after customs officials seized 107 kg of gold from the Trivandrum-Kollam-Kollam (TKK) smuggling route.
- A special NIA court on Tuesday granted bail to 24 people, including 20 accused, in connection with the case.
- The agency has named 38 persons, including 31 accused and seven witnesses, in the chargesheet.
- Among those named are four former ministers, including a former Union minister.
- The accused include two Union ministers, a Union minister of state, a state minister, eight former ministers of state, one Panchayat Raj minister, two former ministers, two senior IAS officers, and a former and current judge.

Details:
- The charges include conspiring to use the facilities of an international airport with a view to smuggling goods or concealed persons or things in violation of the Customs Act.
- The accused were also named in charges such as illegal possession of gold and association with an illicit gang.
- The charges were framed in an 18,000-page chargesheet.

Cases related to gold smuggling:
- The gold smuggling case was first probed by the Enforcement Directorate (ED) in 2017.
- The agency had conducted raids at the homes and offices of several individuals and had arrested 19 people, including the principal secretary to the chief minister.
- The E HC and HC had issued warrants against 43 people, including the principal secretary and the principal secretary to the governor.

Virtual court: SC bench upset with glitches

EX-PRESS NEWS SERVICE NEW DELHI, JANUARY 9

TECHNICAL PROBLEMS in the first virtual court on Tuesday delayed proceedings and stung the bench with glitches.

The Supreme Court on Tuesday was forced to adjourn and adjourn again a virtual hearing when technical problems hindered the smooth conduct of its first virtual court.

At the outset of the virtual hearing – the first such hearing in the Supreme Court – senior advocate Indrajit Singh and lawyer Prithviraj Tikam argued for the petitioners. The court heard arguments for about 10 minutes when an email from one of the advocates displaying a dotted line appeared, indicating a glitch in the system.

The advocates then sought instructions from the bench on how to proceed further. The court asked the advocates to present their arguments in the form of a written submission. However, the advocates were not able to proceed further with the hearing after the court adjourned for the day.

The petition:
- The petition, filed by variousstate governments, sought to allow the transfer of a case from the Delhi High Court to the Supreme Court.
- The petition was filed in connection with the case of a Delhi resident who was accused of a crime.
- The Delhi High Court had sent the case to the Supreme Court for transfer.
- The petitioners sought to allow the case to be transferred to the Supreme Court, citing various grounds.

The court:
- The Supreme Court had previously ordered the transfer of the case to the Supreme Court.
- The court had also directed the Supreme Court to take urgent steps to finalise the matter.
- The court had also ordered the Supreme Court to hold further proceedings on the matter.

The lawyers’ submission:
- The lawyers submitted that the Supreme Court had not taken any steps to finalise the matter.
- They sought an order from the court to transfer the case to the Supreme Court.
- They also sought an order from the court to allow the case to be heard in the Supreme Court.

India needs low-input, high-output agriculture. This cannot be achieved without science and technology.

IN THE CURRENT era of agricultural reform, an important aspect has been the promotion of high-yielding varieties (HYVs) to farmers. This has been a key strategy in India to increase crop yields and ensure food security. The promotion of HYVs has been part of the Indian government’s agricultural policies since the 1960s, and has been a key component of the Green Revolution in the 1960s and 1970s. The success of HYVs in India has been attributed to the work of researchers at the Indian Council for Agricultural Research (ICAR), which has coordinated research efforts across the country to develop and disseminate HYVs.

However, the success of HYVs has not come without challenges. One of the major issues has been the over-reliance on HYVs, which has led to the depletion of groundwater resources and the exhaustion of soil fertility. This has been addressed by the Indian government through various initiatives, such as the National Water Management Project and the National Fertilizer Policy.

Another challenge is the lack of adoption of agricultural technologies by farmers. This has been addressed by the implementation of extension services and farmer training programs.
The government has also taken steps to promote the use of organic and organic-manure-based fertilizers to reduce the dependence on synthetic fertilizers.

In conclusion, the promotion of HYVs has been a key strategy in India to increase crop yields and ensure food security. However, the success of HYVs has not come without challenges, and the government has taken steps to address these challenges through various initiatives.

On Central Vista project, SC is mindful of its role and limits

Government must heed its message on transparency

The government’s recent decision to postpone the Central Vista project has been met with mixed reactions. While some may see it as a positive step towards transparency and accountability, others may view it as an attempt to avoid scrutiny and accountability.

The government needs to be mindful of its role and responsibilities, and must act in the best interests of the country and its citizens.

The child in India

The next big welfare initiative government should focus on the well-being of the child and the mother, from the womb to the first five years.

We mentioned earlier that NFPM focuses on child-related inputs. These are the main takeaways:

1. Suppose it means that the Centre and the states have a policy to make sure the quality and quantity of inputs go into districts, then there would be a real push: Why do our earlier campaigns and inputs improvise? Indeed, as the government has made great strides in providing a number of basic needs to households, such as toilets, clean cooking fuel, and health care, these developments would also serve to aggravate the puzzle of why the health and nutrition of the child in India has deteriorated.

2. As we showed in earlier campaigns, if there are specific factorssuch as changing diets are also important. But the fact of a broader deterioration in the nutrition of the child in India has deteriorated.

3. Moreover, the absolute deterioration in health and nutrition outcomes are seen against the fact that they hovered in the lower-income groups. How had the health and nutrition of Indian children improved? As far as we know, there is no agricultural market?

There were a number of reasons for the sudden jump in the number of poor children, the trend suggests. We have to ensure that the children in poor districts are not neglected. How had the health and nutrition of Indian children improved? As far as we know, there is no agricultural market?

The choice before JNU is not between Nehru and Vivekananda, but between a plurality of thought and the psychology of revenge.

Weber's ideal type of a 'leftist' or 'rightist' was an abstraction, not a real person. It is interesting to note that the words "left" and "right" were used by the early modern European political thinkers, who were not necessarily adherents of any particular political ideology. However, their use of these terms evolved over time and became associated with different political beliefs and value systems. The idea of a left-right divide has been influential in shaping political discourse and political mobilization in many countries around the world. The use of these terms has also been criticized for its potential to oversimplify complex political issues and for its tendency to perpetuate binary oppositions. However, the terms "left" and "right" remain widely used today, and they continue to be a central part of political discourse in many countries. The use of these terms in discussions about political ideology is a reminder of the importance of acknowledging the complexity and diversity of political beliefs and value systems.

New York: The US government will invoke emergency use authorization on Monday for a vaccine developed by Pfizer and BioNTech against Covid-19, potentially allowing millions of Americans to receive the shots as early as next week. The move, a milestone in the efforts to stop a pandemic that has killed more than 300,000 Americans, comes as the country continues to grapple with one of the world’s worst outbreaks.

United States

Mike Pence, the US vice-president, said in a statement that the move was being made because “it is in the best interest of the American people to ensure that safe, effective and widely available coronavirus vaccines are promptly deployed to key populations in need.”

The announcement was a victory for Pfizer, which has been attempting to win emergency use authorisation for its vaccine since late October. The company said it was ready to file for authorisation as soon as it had enough data from trials, but the US government had wanted to ensure that the vaccine was safe and effective before it was approved.

The vaccine is the first to be authorised for emergency use in the US, and it has been widely seen as a turning point in the pandemic, with the government hoping to vaccinate 20 million people by the end of December.

“It’s a great day for America,” said Mike Pence, who is heading up the US task force to fight the pandemic. “This is a major step towards ending the pandemic.”

The move is also likely to boost the US stock market, which has been struggling to recover from the pandemic. The S&P 500 index, which tracks the performance of the largest US companies, was up 0.6% in early trading on Monday.

In China, the government has already started giving vaccines to frontline workers and the elderly, and the country is expected to vaccinate about 400 million people by the end of the year.

The US government has also announced plans to begin vaccinating healthcare workers and elderly people on December 14, and to expand the programme to vulnerable groups such as nursing home residents and people with underlying health conditions by the end of January.

The British government has also said it will start vaccinating priority groups in the UK from December 15, with more than 5 million doses of the vaccine expected to be available by the end of January.

South Korea

The South Korean government has announced plans to start vaccinating the elderly and vulnerable groups in January, with about 200,000 doses of the vaccine expected to be available each week.
