The office-in-charge of a police station in western Uttar Pradesh has been suspended after “insubordination” against a team of doctors. The post-mortem examination had recommended a custodial death. The police officer in charge, however, said that he would not comply with the doctors’ demand. The dispute had escalated into a custodial death, the doctors had alleged. The family of the deceased, a 50-year-old man, had approached the police, seeking an investigation into the death. The family members had said that the man had been beaten up by the police personnel and had been taken to the hospital in a police car. The autopsy report confirmed that the man had died due to “external injuries.”

To ensure restructuring is done early

The RBI has indicated that this can be done without compromising on the interests of the lenders. The Resolution Committee and the creditors committee can make a case to the financial sector regulator. To ensure restructuring is done early, the committee specifically considered a framework in which the board for industrial and financial reconstruction (BIFR) is abolished and a new entity is created where the committee fulfills the role of the BIFR.

For the purpose of making the resolution plan to be implemented, the RBI clarification ensures that the approach will be finalized in the interests of the lenders. The BIFR cannot easily accept collateralizing mortgage debt in the current scenario. The central bank said this was a major deterrent in implementing the resolution of exposure to ailing banks. Post-covid, the core concept of the resolution framework is itself the modification of the existing framework.

Dalits and the oppressions within

The real problem with the bias in law enforcement is that the men in uniform who are capable of protecting the people are not actually doing so. While the police have the mandate to protect the people, they are truly serving the rich and powerful. The people of this country are not being served; they are simply being governed.

In democracy, it is the voice of the people that matters. If the people of this country want to see change, they must speak up. But they are being silenced, and their voices are not being heard. This is not acceptable, and it is time for change.

In the loose campaign, the Hindustan Times has been running a series of articles, columns, and editorials that are aimed at bringing attention to the plight of Dalit and other marginalized communities. The campaign has been running for several weeks now, and it has been receiving a lot of attention from the public.

The campaign has been successful in bringing attention to the issues facing Dalit and other marginalized communities. It has also helped to raise awareness about the importance of equality and justice.

However, the campaign has also faced criticism from some quarters. Some people have accused the Hindustan Times of being biased and of not giving a fair and balanced view of the issues. Other people have praised the campaign and have said that it is needed now more than ever.

Overall, the loose campaign has been a success. It has helped to bring attention to the issues facing Dalit and other marginalized communities, and it has also helped to raise awareness about the importance of equality and justice.
