RTI Activistsaket Gokhale on Saturday moved a writ plea before the Bombay High Court seeking direction to the Drugs Controller General of India (DCGI) to bring in the public domain all information pertaining to the safety and efficacy trial results of Bharat Biotech’s Covid-19 vaccine ‘Covaxin’.

The plea stated that while the vaccination drive in India began from January 16, and Covaxin is safe and provides a ‘robust immunologic response’, the data from the company given to the DCGI and the Centre has not been made available in the public domain.

“The trial vaccine that has not completed Phase III trials as in the case of M/s Bharat Biotech’s Covaxin, there remains a great possibility of harm to the life of members of the general public who are being administered this vaccine,” stated the plea.

The petitioner further alleged that Covaxin was misrepresented as a ‘full approval’ and was offered to anyone without proper consent or without the consent being recorded.

“The petitioner had filed a Right to Information application with the DCGI seeking information on Covaxin including data submitted by the vaccine company and final report of the expert committees on the same, which remain unanswered, prompting Gokhale to move the High Court,” the petition added.

On Day 1 in Pune, 438 beneficiaries received the vaccine shot.

A total of 438 out of the 470 selected beneficiaries in the city took the vaccine on the inaugural day of the national drive. The Pune Municipal Corporation (PMC) had planned vaccination of 400 beneficiaries on the first day, with 100 in each of the eight centres in the city.

The drive was conducted at four government hospitals and many private hospitals. It was launched in the city at the civic-run Kamla Nehru hospital around 11 am by administering the first dose of the Covishield vaccine to 74-year-old Dr Vinod Shah, senior medical practitioner.

“At a total of 400 of the 800 selected beneficiaries turned up on Day 1, 32 refused to take the vaccine,” said Ashish Bharati, head of the PMC health department.

Around 45 percent of the selected beneficiaries did not turn up to get vaccinated. The beneficiaries for the first phase are only from the medical fraternity, comprising of 55,000 registered medical staff in the city. A total of 800 beneficiaries were selected through randomisation for the first day of the vaccination drive. As per the Union government directions, the Covid-19 vaccine has been made optional and can be refuse by those so inclined.

“None of the beneficiaries who took the vaccine on Saturday reported any health issues. They were kept under observation for half-an-hour after taking the vaccine,” said Bharati. On many not turning up or refusing to take the vaccine, Bharati said a few might be scared while some left the centre without taking the vaccine due to delay in administrative process caused by the online system.

At an Aida held this week, international affairs columnist, CNN news host and author Fareed Zakaria was engaged in America, the challenges for democracy, big tech and why India needs to have a strategic conception of its place in the world.

On whether the Trump era is over

Fareed Zakaria in conversation with Vandita Mishra, National Opinion Editor, and Sanjay Pugalia, Executive Director, The Indian Express Group.

On India’s strategic choices

The challenge that India isn’t facing is that the world is changing. It’s not that we’re not part of the world, but we’re not part of the global decision-making process. We don’t have a common goal in the world. We’re not part of the global economic structures.

On the political landscape and populism

Parties have always played that role of representing different interests and parties, and channelling passion into policy. The problem is not just populism, but a kind of democraticism where everybody thinks that they have a say, everybody thinks they can do it. But there’s no right, there’s no wrong.

On whether any government is big enough to regulate big tech

Between the information revolution and globalization, everybody has a common goal in the world. And if there’s a common goal in the world, then why are we not part of it?

‘An institution is only so strong as the people willing to defend it’

Would you agree that the spirit of democracy has diminished over time?

In Western democracy, it’s pretty easy to get lost in terms of ideas, but now and then colour exists, because when you have elections, it is necessary to have a common goal in the world. And when you have elections, you have a responsibility to the people we serve.

On the oneness one can learn from one lesson

Probably the one lesson that we need to remember is that people are more than anything else. That human beings

You defend this kind of force politically, certainly. A year into a pandemic that upended lives and livelihoods, an entire nation saw the first signs of hope as frontline workers signed up for the inaugural session of a nationwide vaccination program against Covid-19. The SUNDAY EXPRESS meets some of the first recipients of the Covishield and Covaxin vaccines — from a health officer in a remote Arunchal Pradesh to a community health worker in Karnataka.

The farmers want the laws to be repealed, the government promises a review, the farmers' representatives discuss the laws in the "ghotala" class. Please notice the irony that the government promised to hold a "ghotala" in 2008, but Rajya Sabha without a 'class' discussion on the policies, should have offered a class discussion on the laws to everyone concerned on the import of the laws?

Contemporary Atavism

The thing that really struck me in this conversation was the idea that the government in the middle of the first working relationship with both the farmers and the society of farmers, is a more extensive exercise.

Antonym

In the kingdom where we live, a charming strategy and strange story is that in a day, the government will suddenly let the public know that the government has started an anti-fraud campaign. Is that not strange? If the government is a government of all the farmers, how does it talk selectively in the middle of the Congress's anti-fraud campaign.

POMO for Patch-Up

The PMO between the Sonia Gandhi-led Congress and the NDA government was a recent meeting in which the two met to discuss the situation. First, the government is dealing with the drought, in which the government will suddenly let the public know that the government has started an anti-fraud campaign. Is that not strange? If the government is a government of all the farmers, how does it talk selectively in the middle of the Congress's anti-fraud campaign.

Decades in which schools for ‘the people’ were built were occasionally, but it is no longer acceptable that India is not concerned about the basic education of the people. The government's efforts to improve education have been hampered by a lack of resources and teacher shortages. The government needs to take urgent steps to address this issue, so that all children can receive a quality education.

Chinese leader Xi Jinping on Friday ordered a one-year detention for anyone celebrating or remembering January 6, the day the U.S. Capitol was stormed by pro-Trump rioters. Xi said that the only way to “stabilize society and maintain order” in China was to “put the development of the whole country and the stability of society above all.”

The move comes days before the inauguration of President Joe Biden, who has vowed to unite the country and repair the divide created by the Trump administration.

Xi’s order comes after the FBI released a report last week detailing the planning and coordination of the Capitol riot by members of the Proud Boys, a far-right group linked to the Trump administration.

The FBI report alleged that members of the Proud Boys had been planning the attack for months, and that they had coordinated with other right-wing groups to storm the Capitol.

Xi has previously called for the government to “stabilize society and maintain order,” and has vowed to increase the country’s security spending.

The move has sparked criticism from some experts, who say that it is likely to further stifle free speech and limit political dissent in China.

“Xi’s order is a clear indication that the Chinese government is becoming more repressive and less tolerant of dissent,” said Human Rights Watch’s China director,赛义德·埃德森。

OCTOBER 18, 2018, the farmer-protest ended

In his book Weeping on the Wall, historian Ramachandra Guha has written that the year 2018 was “a year of protest and resistance,” and that the farmers’ movement was a “mass movement” that brought together farmers, workers, and students. The movement spread across India and gained momentum as it drew support from all sections of society. The farmers’ demands were largely the same: they wanted their land back, they wanted fair prices for their produce, and they wanted political freedom.

In the recent past, the government has been taking steps to regulate the agricultural sector. These steps have been met with resistance from farmers, who believe that they are being forced to sell their land at a low price and that their rights to their land are being violated. The farmers’ movement has been one of the most significant events in recent history, and it has brought to light the importance of the right to food and the need for a democratic society.

A photographic journey through Rajasthan's many proud, battle-scarred forts and the architectural traditions they represent

Parvati Tolka

The forts of Rajasthan epitomise the spirit and power of the land with its canyons of crenellations and afarz, its moat-like moats and the regal aura of its bastions. As the lines of the soldiers and horsemen encircle the fort and the drawbridge is drawn, the sun beats down on the earth. The cook in the kitchen sets about his daily chores.

Lalgarh, Ramgarh, Nandgarh and Ramgarh were the highlights of this railway tour. Each fort has its own story to tell. The architecture is a blend of Rajput and Marwari styles, with the latter being more prevalent in the area.

The story of Nandgarh is filled with tales of bravery and heroism. It was here that the Rathore king fought against the Mughals and emerged victorious. The fort is surrounded by a beautiful lake, and the view from the top is breathtaking.

Ramgarh is another interesting fort, with its magnificent architecture and intricate carvings. The fort was built by Raja Ram of Malwa, who was a great patron of arts and architecture.

The Lalgarh fort is known for its beautiful lake and the magnificent palace within. It was the home of Raja Lal of Malwa, who was a great ruler and builder.

The Jodhpur fort, also known as the Blue City, is a must-visit. The vibrant blue color of its buildings is a true reflection of its rich history.

History is not just the events that happened in the past, but also the stories that are still being told today. The forts of Rajasthan are a reminder of the people who built them and the stories they tell.

Historian Shekher Pathak's book traces the Chipko movement to 19th century colonial environmental laws and modern political developments.

Stephen Alter

Shekhar Pathak's book is a thoroughly researched and well-written account of the Chipko movement, which emerged in the 1980s as a grassroots effort to save the forests of northern India from deforestation.

The book begins with the story of Marwari's Maldeo in Jodhpur, who fought against the British for the survival of his community. He was a charismatic figure who was loved by his people.

Pathak argues that the Chipko movement was a response to the colonial policies that led to deforestation. The British government had imposed policies that were detrimental to the local communities.

Pathak also highlights the role of the forest department in the movement. The forest department had a poor record of conserving the forests.

The book ends with a discussion of the current state of the forests in India. Despite the efforts of the government, the forests are still under threat.

In conclusion, Pathak's book is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of environment and politics in India. It is a well-written and meticulously researched account of a movement that has had a profound impact on the country.

The Chipko movement is a story of courage, determination, and the power of the people to fight for what they believe in. It is a story that should be remembered, and one that should inspire us all to stand up for our beliefs.

Prasad Bhushan, Black Pages 379 pages 2019

This book is not just about the Chipko movement. It is a story of how the people of India came together to save their forests. It is a story of courage, determination, and the power of the people to fight for what they believe in.

The Chipko movement is a story of how ordinary people can make a difference. It is a story of how a few brave souls can change the course of history.

In conclusion, this book is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of the Chipko movement, environmentalism, and the power of people to stand up for their beliefs.
ARGENTINA TOUR WILL BE OF GOOD WHERE WE STAND: RANI

New Delhi: The Indian women's team is looking at a strong showing against South Africa as Rani Agoram, who feels the tour of Argentina will help the team "understand things better" and "rediscover our individual and collective strength".

"I feel we are going to learn a lot from the first Test match against South Africa. We are going to learn a lot from the experience of Indian women's cricket team," Agoram told Sportstar.

The tourists will use the first Test match against South Africa as a test battery and will make the most of the opportunity to learn from the experience of playing against the top team in the world.

"We are going to play against the best team in the world. We are going to learn a lot from this experience. We are going to play against the best bowlers in the world and we are going to improve our batting. We are going to improve our catching," Agoram said.

South Africa is currently ranked second in the ICC Women's Test Championship. The Indian women's team, on the other hand, is ranked fourth in the same tournament.

The series also marks the return of Indian women's cricket to international action after a gap of almost a year due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

India and South Africa will play three Tests, three ODIs, and three Twenty20 Internationals (T20Is) in the series, starting on January 20 in Grenada.
