Patients of diabetes, hypertension to be in high priority for Covid vaccination in 3rd phase

State officials said while most of the state was under these treatment at government-run hospitals, a few places in the private sector might still face issues. ‘We ask private clinicians and hospitals to avoid a particular private sector where there might be an issue next week,’ they added. The government has come up with no guidelines on this, said Dr Tushar Vaidya, a Nashik-based endocrinologist.

Diabetics and Hypertension patients are among the high-risk groups that were vaccinated against Covid-19. The government has named them as one of the priority groups to receive the vaccine.

The government is also working on plans to vaccinate patients who are on dialysis and have a history of heart disease. These patients are at high risk of complications from Covid-19 and are usually advised to get vaccinated as soon as possible.

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE

MUMBAI: The Maharashtra government had provided the plan for the third phase of the Covid vaccination drive on Wednesday, and it has included patients with diabetes and hypertension.

The government has revised its policy to include these patients, who are considered high risk, in the third phase of the vaccination drive. The move comes as a significant development in the country’s efforts to control the spread of Covid-19.

The Maharashtra government announced that patients with diabetes and hypertension will be vaccinated in the third phase of the vaccination drive, which is scheduled to begin on April 16. The government has included these patients in the priority list as they are at high risk of developing severe symptoms if they contract Covid-19.

The decision was taken after consultations with medical experts and based on the latest evidence available. The government has been cautious in including these patients in the vaccination drive, as they are more vulnerable to complications from Covid-19.

The third phase of the vaccination drive is expected to cover around 8 million people in the state, including patients with diabetes and hypertension. The state government has already started preparing for this phase, and vaccination centers are being set up in various areas.

In early May, the government ruled out the possibility of lowering prices of farm commodities, particularly sugar, despite the ongoing protests against the Centre’s December 9 proposal of concessions regarding sugar export.

The Centre had, in November 2020, provided an incentive of Rs 10.86 per tonne to mills to export up to 60 lakh tonnes of sugar in the 2020-21 season, despite mills complaining about low domestic prices.

The government had also agreed to provide govt-owned foodCorp’s raw material to sugar mills in a Rs 65,000-crore package for the sugar season, which was expected to bring in additional liquidity to mills from the government.

Another deal that Interes has seen is pertaining to tokenization of the payments of the students of the University of Basque Country in Spain. Through this tokenization, students can use their tokens for purchases at the university store, library, and other services provided by the university. The tokenization process involves the use of blockchain technology, which ensures the security and privacy of the students' data.

There is also a deal with the University of Basque Country in Spain, where the university is looking to use Interes’ technology to manage its financial transactions. The university wants to use Interes’ platform to automate its financial processes, such as invoicing, billing, and payments. This will help the university to reduce the manual workload and ensure accurate and timely transactions.

In addition, Interes has also signed a deal with the University of Basque Country in Spain to use its technology to manage the attendance of the students. The university wants to use Interes’ platform to automate the attendance process, which currently involves manual methods. By using Interes’ platform, the university expects to reduce the time and effort required for the attendance process.

DRAVA DURING the COVID-19 crisis, the apprehensions of farmers and poor urban households have dominated news headlines. However, the agricultural sector, like many other sectors, has been affected by the pandemic. The government has been proactive in ensuring the supply chain remains functional and prices remain stable. The government has also taken measures to support the agricultural sector, which is a significant contributor to the country’s GDP. The Agriculture Minister, Narendra Singh Tomar, recently announced a new scheme called Pradhan Mantri Fasal Bima Yojana (PMFBY) which aims to provide insurance to farmers against the uncertainties of crop production. The scheme will provide coverage to farmers against the risks of crop failure, natural calamities, and market fluctuations. In addition, the government has also announced measures to support the rural economy, such as the Pradhan Mantri Mudra Yojana and the Pradhan Mantri Awas Yojana. These initiatives aim to provide financial assistance to farmers and improve the living standards of millions of rural households.

By flagging malice in handling of Tablíghis episode, Delhi court upholds earlier order to removeosaic from TV

In APRIL, when the COVID-19 pandemic had just begun in India, an International Modern museums group, the Tablígh Jamaat, was charged of organizing illegal gatherings. The group, which is active in India and several other countries, had been accused of promoting Islamic fundamentalism and radicalization. However, the court refused to grant an order to ban the group. On April 24, 2020, the court ruled that the government’s actions were unjustified and that the group’s activities were protected under the country’s constitution. The court also noted that the government’s actions were based on a precautionary measure, and that the group’s activities were not in violation of any law.

There are several initiatives that should be taken to improve child nutrition in India, including the implementation of effective policies, the provision of adequate nutrition, and the promotion of healthy lifestyles. The government has introduced several schemes to improve child nutrition, including the Mid-Day Meal Programme and the National Nutrition Mission. These schemes have been successful in increasing the intake of nutritious food among children, but there is still a need for improvement. The government should focus on strengthening these schemes and ensuring that they reach every child in the country. In conclusion, child nutrition remains a significant challenge in India, and there is a need for urgent action to address this issue.
Of course, through the widespread efforts of both the government and the public, we have seen improvements. This is particularly evident in the case of COVID-19, where we have seen a significant reduction in the spread of the virus.

In terms of enforcement, the government has taken a strong stance, ensuring that proper isolation and quarantine measures are in place. This has helped to contain the spread of the virus and prevent further outbreaks.

In conclusion, the combination of proactive measures, effective enforcement, and public engagement has been crucial in managing the pandemic. As we move forward, it is important that we continue to stay vigilant and remain committed to implementing these strategies to ensure the health and safety of all.

The next step is to focus on vaccination and booster shots, which will help to further reduce the risk of transmission and protect vulnerable individuals. It is essential that we work together to achieve high vaccination rates to protect ourselves and our communities.

In summary, while we have made progress, we must remain cautious and continue to adapt our strategies as necessary. With the ongoing changes in the pandemic and the emergence of new variants, it is crucial that we stay informed and take action to ensure the safety of all.

Together, we can continue to make progress and protect our loved ones. Let us remain committed to these efforts and work to achieve a safer and healthier future for all.

New Zealand child abuse inquiry finds quarter of kids in state and faith-based care suffering sexual abuse

The report estimated that up to 27,000 children had been sexually and physically abused in state and faith-based care facilities across the country between 1950 and 2012. It also found that at least 120 children were killed in state and faith-based care in that period.

The report's author, Judge Lowell Goddard, said the findings were “hard to imagine” and “outrageous.” He said the government and religious authorities “had failed these children.”

The report also revealed systematic abuse and neglect in state and faith-based care facilities, and recommended the government create a new “child protection law” to prevent such abuses in the future.

The report prompted New Zealand Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern to announce a royal commission into historical child sexual abuse. She said the government would set up a “credible, independent, and fearless inquiry” to investigate the allegations.

The report also recommended that the government provide financial compensation to survivors of abuse.

The report was widely criticized by religious leaders, who said it was “offensive” and “utterly false.” Some also accused the report of being biased and anti-religious.

However, the report was generally welcomed by survivors of abuse, who said it was a “bold” and “important” step towards accountability and justice.

The report also highlighted the need for better training and support for professionals working with children, and for greater accountability and transparency in the handling of child abuse reports.

New Zealand had already made some progress in this area, with the establishment of the Child Sexual Abuse Review Panel and the introduction of new laws to better protect children. But the report urged the government to do more to address the root causes of child abuse and to support survivors of abuse.

The report also called for greater investment in early childhood education, which research has shown to be the key to preventing child abuse in the first place.

The report was a significant step forward in New Zealand’s response to child abuse, and it was widely seen as a model for other countries to follow. But there was still much work to be done, and the government continued to face criticism for its slow and inadequate response to the crisis.

The report was released in June 2018, and it was widely praised for its thoroughness and transparency. It was a landmark report that helped bring to light the extent of the problem, and it paved the way for further action to be taken.

The report also helped to establish a new national framework for responding to child abuse, and it provided a blueprint for other countries to follow.

CABINET COMMITTEE ON SECURTY DECISION: TOUGH ROAD AHEAD FOR CHINA COS

Telecom: Govt to come out with ‘trusted, non-trusted’ sources

The Cabinet Committee on Security, chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, on Thursday had directed the Department of Telecommunications (DoT) to come out with a framework of ‘trusted’ and ‘non-trusted’ suppliers.

“DoT shall make it compulsory to make equipment from trusted sources and make it mandatory for all the government agencies, PSU’s and banks to ensure that they procure telecom equipment from trusted entities,” a top official of the Department of Finance told The Indian Express.

This, the official said, was a major policy move, which was expected to create a new mechanism for China’s telecom equipment providers to enter India’s market.

The move could potentially make it more difficult for Chinese telecom companies to enter India’s market. The Chinese companies are also under global scrutiny for allegedly installing ‘backdoor’ or ‘trapdoor’ software in their equipment.

“The move could potentially make it more difficult for Chinese telecom companies to enter India’s market. The Chinese companies are also under global scrutiny for allegedly installing ‘backdoor’ or ‘trapdoor’ software in their equipment,” the official said.

The move comes as the Centre is considering a new framework to ensure that telecom equipment suppliers are trusted.

“The move comes as the Centre is considering a new framework to ensure that telecom equipment suppliers are trusted. This will help in reducing the risk of security threats and ensure that equipment is secure,” the official said.

The official said that the framework will be based on the evaluation of the companies’ security practices, including their past performance, financial health, and compliance with international standards.

The framework will also include a meet-in-person mechanism to ensure that the companies are transparent.
