Covid deepened inequalities: wealth, education, gender

Wealth surge of richest in 10 years could sustain NREGS for 10 years

A New York-based think tank has found that the Covid-19 pandemic has deepened inequalities in wealth, education and gender in India and around the world.

The report, titled ‘The State of Inequality’, has found that the rich have become richer amidst the pandemic, while the poor have become poorer.

The report states that the gap between the rich and the poor has widened significantly, with the richest 1% of the world’s population owning more than 40% of global wealth.

In India, the report found that the wealth of the richest 1% increased by 23% in the past year, while the wealth of the poorest 50% decreased by 12%.

The report also found that the wealth gap between men and women has widened, with men owning more than twice as much wealth as women.

In education, the report found that the rich have access to better educational opportunities, while the poor are left behind.

In gender, the report found that women are still facing discrimination and inequality, with women earning less than men in the same jobs.

The report concludes that the pandemic has created a ‘new normal’ of inequality, with the rich getting richer and the poor getting poorer.

Preserving biodiversity: Panel to seek environment report from developers

LAXMIKAN Singh

In order to prevent destruction of biodiversity due to rapid redevelopment projects taking place in Mumbai, the Biodiversity Management Committee that came into effect on December 1 has planned to seek an Environment Impact Assessment (EIA) report from developers. The panel is now discussing various ways to protect and preserve existing biodiversity of the city. The 23-member panel has also planned to come up with a biodiversity map for the city’s limits as an ecologically sensitive zone (ESZ).

A senior official of the panel said big projects covering an area of 20,000 square meters or more could be covered under this proposal. “The plan is at the discussion stage and we will consult experts in the near future. The idea is to assess the environmental impact of such large-scale projects,” said Ramakant Bhardwaj, who heads the panel.

The ESA is a report that will study the impact of a particular project on the environment and also suggest mitigation measures. Every year Mumbai has seen many redevelopment projects which include re-development of old buildings, slum rehabilitation projects and new constructions.

A Biodiversity Management Panel (BMP) is currently working on a people’s biodiversity register—a detailed database of the city’s biodiversity including flora, fauna, marine life and birds, which will be used to monitor the city’s biodiversity. The panel’s first task will be to prepare a report of the area which includes flora, fauna, wildlife, birds, marine life and to further make a map or distribution of the benefit of biodiversity present in the city.

PM Shri Narendra Modi

Money is a state of mind, let us think of it to start thinking like a state. When Mumbai Port Expressway was being built, money was being spent at Rs 2500 crores. On the other hand, when we need Rs 2500 crores, we will do it in the same way. We need money to build roads, bridges, and hospitals. We need it to build a state. So, let us think of it that way.

Shakeel Ahmed, AAOHP Resident Director

There was a time, not so long ago, when farmers had to face the cost of seeds, fertilizers, pesticides, and labor. But now, the government is providing all these free to the farmers. The farmers can now focus on increasing their productivity and quality of life.

Excerpts from farmers on their way to Mumbai, on Sunday:

- “We are on our way to participate in the protest march. We have been preparing for this for a long time. We are ready to face any challenge. We will not give in to any pressure.”

- “We are here to fight for our rights. We are not scared of anyone. We will continue our protest till our demands are fulfilled.”

- “We are here to support the farmers’ movement. We are with them in this fight for justice.”

It's a sad truth that the world is changing rapidly, and we need to adapt quickly to stay ahead. The current global situation is a perfect example of this. With the rise of technology, we are able to access information at a faster rate than ever before. However, this has also led to a decrease in the quality of information and an increase in misinformation. It is important for individuals to be critical thinkers and to verify the information they receive before accepting it as true. In addition, it is essential for governments and organizations to work together to ensure that accurate and reliable information is available to all. This will help to prevent the spread of misinformation and ensure that people are able to make informed decisions.
Rhesus macaque show promise as model for Covid-19 vaccine studies

By Sneha Satpute

Erik Edlund and colleagues in a study have shown that the rhesus macaque can be an effective model for preclinical vaccine studies. The researchers believe that the macaques’ immune responses to SARS-CoV-2 are similar to those of humans, which could make them useful in testing new vaccines.

The study, published in the journal Nature Medicine, found that rhesus macaques given a single dose of a COVID-19 vaccine developed a strong immune response and were protected from a challenge infection with the virus.

The results of the study suggest that rhesus macaques could be used to evaluate the safety and efficacy of COVID-19 vaccines in preclinical trials. This could help accelerate the development of vaccines for human use.

What is a rhesus macaque?

Rhesus macaques are a species of monkey native to South Asia. They are commonly used in biomedical research and are easily trained to perform tasks.

What is COVID-19?

COVID-19, or coronavirus disease 2019, is a respiratory illness caused by the severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2). The virus is highly contagious and has spread globally, causing a pandemic.

What is a vaccine?

A vaccine is a biological preparation made from bacteriophages (viruses that infect bacteria), viruses, or their parts that are designed to stimulate an immune response in the body. This response induces a lasting protective immune response, which can provide protection against a specific type of disease.

Why is the rhesus macaque important as a model for COVID-19 vaccine development?

Rhesus macaques are commonly used in preclinical vaccine studies because they have a highly conserved immune system compared to other non-human primates. This makes them a valuable model for testing vaccines and understanding the immune response to COVID-19.

What are the next steps for the rhesus macaque model?

The next steps for the rhesus macaque model include scaling up the vaccine trials to include more animals and conducting phase 1 clinical trials in humans to evaluate the safety and efficacy of the vaccine.

Asia’s El Chapo arrested in Amsterdam

Arrested

Amsterdam: Dutch police said on Saturday they had arrested the alleged drug lord Joaquin “El Chapo” Guzman for drug trafficking.

Guzman, who is also known as the “King of Kings,” was arrested in January by Mexican marines in the Pacific Ocean while trying to flee to Mexico via a tunnel under the sea.

Guzman has been convicted in the United States of conspiracy to distribute five tons of heroin and five tons of marijuana.

The US government has been trying to extradite him to stand trial in New York, but Mexico has been delaying the process.

Guzman is one of the most powerful drug lords in the world and is considered by many to be the most dangerous criminal in the world.

The arrest of Guzman is a major blow to the Sinaloa Cartel, his former cartel, and a major victory for the Mexican government.

The US government has been pursuing the extradition of Guzman for years, and his arrest is a significant step forward in the fight against drug trafficking.

The US government has been working closely with Mexico to ensure that Guzman is extradited to stand trial in the US.
